demonstrates the ways in which these city state capitals were different from Tenochtitlan and convincingly argues that urban design is the direct result of decisions made by political leaders to legitimize their own power and political roles in the states of the Aztec empire dominating much of the Basin of Mexico and beyond until its collapse around AD 650 Teotihuacan and Early Classic Mesoamerica explores the complex nature of Teotihuacan's interactions with other regions from both central and peripheral vantage points. The volume offers a multiscalar view of power and identity showing that the spread of Teotihuacan-related material culture may have resulted from direct and indirect state administration, colonization, emulation by local groups, economic transactions, single event elite interactions, and various kinds of social and political alliances. The contributors explore questions concerning who interacted with whom, what kinds of materials and ideas were exchanged, what role interregional interactions played in the creation, transformation, and contestation of power and identity within the city and among local polities, and how interactions on different scales were articulated. The answers to these questions reveal an Early Classic Mesoamerican world engaged in complex economic exchanges, multidirectional movements of goods and ideas, and a range of material patterns that require local, regional, and macroregional contextualization. Focusing on the intersecting themes of identity and power, Teotihuacan and Early Classic Mesoamerica makes a strong contribution to the understanding of the role of this important metropolis in the Early Classic history of the region. The volume will be of interest to scholars and graduate students of Mesoamerican archaeology, the archaeology of interaction, and the archaeology of identity.
