Migration, Mobility and Modernization David J. Siddle, 2000-01-01 For almost a hundred years the academic study of migration concentrated on evolving standardised models of migration behaviour based on data from censuses or the registration of births marriages and deaths More recently it has been realised that such models fail to take into account the decision making behind migration and that better understanding will come from study of the behaviour of individuals as well as aggregate numbers In this book the imaginative use of alternative sources DS for example apprentice books guild and craft records legal and court documents diaries and biographies DS gives fresh insights into the processes of movement to reveal much more complex circulatory behaviour than the standard models derived from census and registration sources alone have suggested The first chapter confronts the issue of rural mobility in post famine Ireland and is followed by a study centred on Alpine rural families which built impressive networks across pre industrial Western Europe Two chapters focus on the particular characteristics of worker groups mining families of south Lancashire during the period of rapid increase in coal production in the eighteenth century and the organised mobility of skilled labour in nineteenth century central Europe Next an imaginative and rigorous deployment of the techniques of family reconstruction and record linkage embracing a variety of sources vital event registers wills port books apprentice records teases out the migration histories of those who settled in eighteenth century Liverpool There are two chapters on female migrant behaviour drawing attention in the case of eighteenth century Rheims to the opportunities and restrictions on the life of migrant women at different points in their lifecycles and showing how poor women struggled to survive in nineteenth century Dublin The final chapter uses family histories assembled by numerous genealogists and family historians to challenge the orthodox view of direct stepwise migration from a smaller to a larger town in the urban hierarchy
