1769 was the first work of fiction to be set in Canada and also the first book to reflect on the situation of the woman writer there. Her analysis of the experience of writing in Canada is continued by the five other writers considered in this study: Susanna Moodie, Sara Jeannette Duncan, L. M. Montgomery, Margaret Atwood and Carol Shields. All of these authors examine the social position of the woman of letters in Canada, the intellectual stimulation available to her, the literary possibilities of Canadian subject matter and the practical aspects of reading, writing and publishing in a post colonial country. This book turns on the ways in which those aspects of authorship and literary culture in Canada have been inscribed in imaginative autobiographical and critical texts by the six authors. It traces the evolving situation of the Canadian woman writer over the course of two centuries and explores the impact of social and cultural change on the experience of writing in Canada.

Diversity and Change in Early Canadian Women's Writing Jennifer Chambers, 2009-10-02 Diversity and Change in Early Canadian Women's Writing is a collection of nine essays thematically arranged dedicated to the works of women writing between 1828 and 1914. It is for all those readers who were certain that there had to be diverse, interesting, socially relevant voices in early Canadian women's writing. It is equally for sceptics who will find that early Canada is not bereft of women writers or of writing of substance. When Lorraine McMullen published the collection of essays Rediscovering Our Foremothers in 1990, she considered the field in its infancy. As keen as literary historians and critics have been to assess the contributions of women to Canada's early cultural scene, this collection moves beyond listing which women were writing in early Canada and brings together a study of their journalistic and literary works. For a nation caught up in projects to enhance nation building and concerned with the development of its national literature, the essays reconnect with early literary works by women. Eighteen years after McMullen's, this collection shows the progression along the path that hers initiated. Working with theories of genre, gender, socio-politics, literature.

history and drama the essayists make cases not only for the women writing but also for the literary voices they created to work for diversity and social change in Canada Journal of Women's History, 2000
