

Ancient Athens

The most powerful Classical city-state was Athens. Its bustling town spread out around a rocky hill called the Acropolis, topped with gleaming marble temples.

Around 100,000 people lived in Athens, including craftsmen, merchants, philosophers, and politicians.

The city was surrounded by high walls. Towered gateways were designed to let troops through and keep enemies out.

The first ever symposium in Athens was on the Acropolis. Later, the hill became a sacred place for worshipping the gods.

The agora market was at the heart of the city. Athenians came here to buy and sell goods, and catch up on the latest news.

The city guards

The guards who surrounded the open-fronted market buildings called stoa.

Stoa of Poros

Place for meeting gods

High gods were discussed by a group of Athenians called the boule. They met here in the bouleuterion to debate important issues.

Stoa - men and women found it worth to talk questions - were paid to be market houses

A long road called the Panathenaic Way led from the main city gate

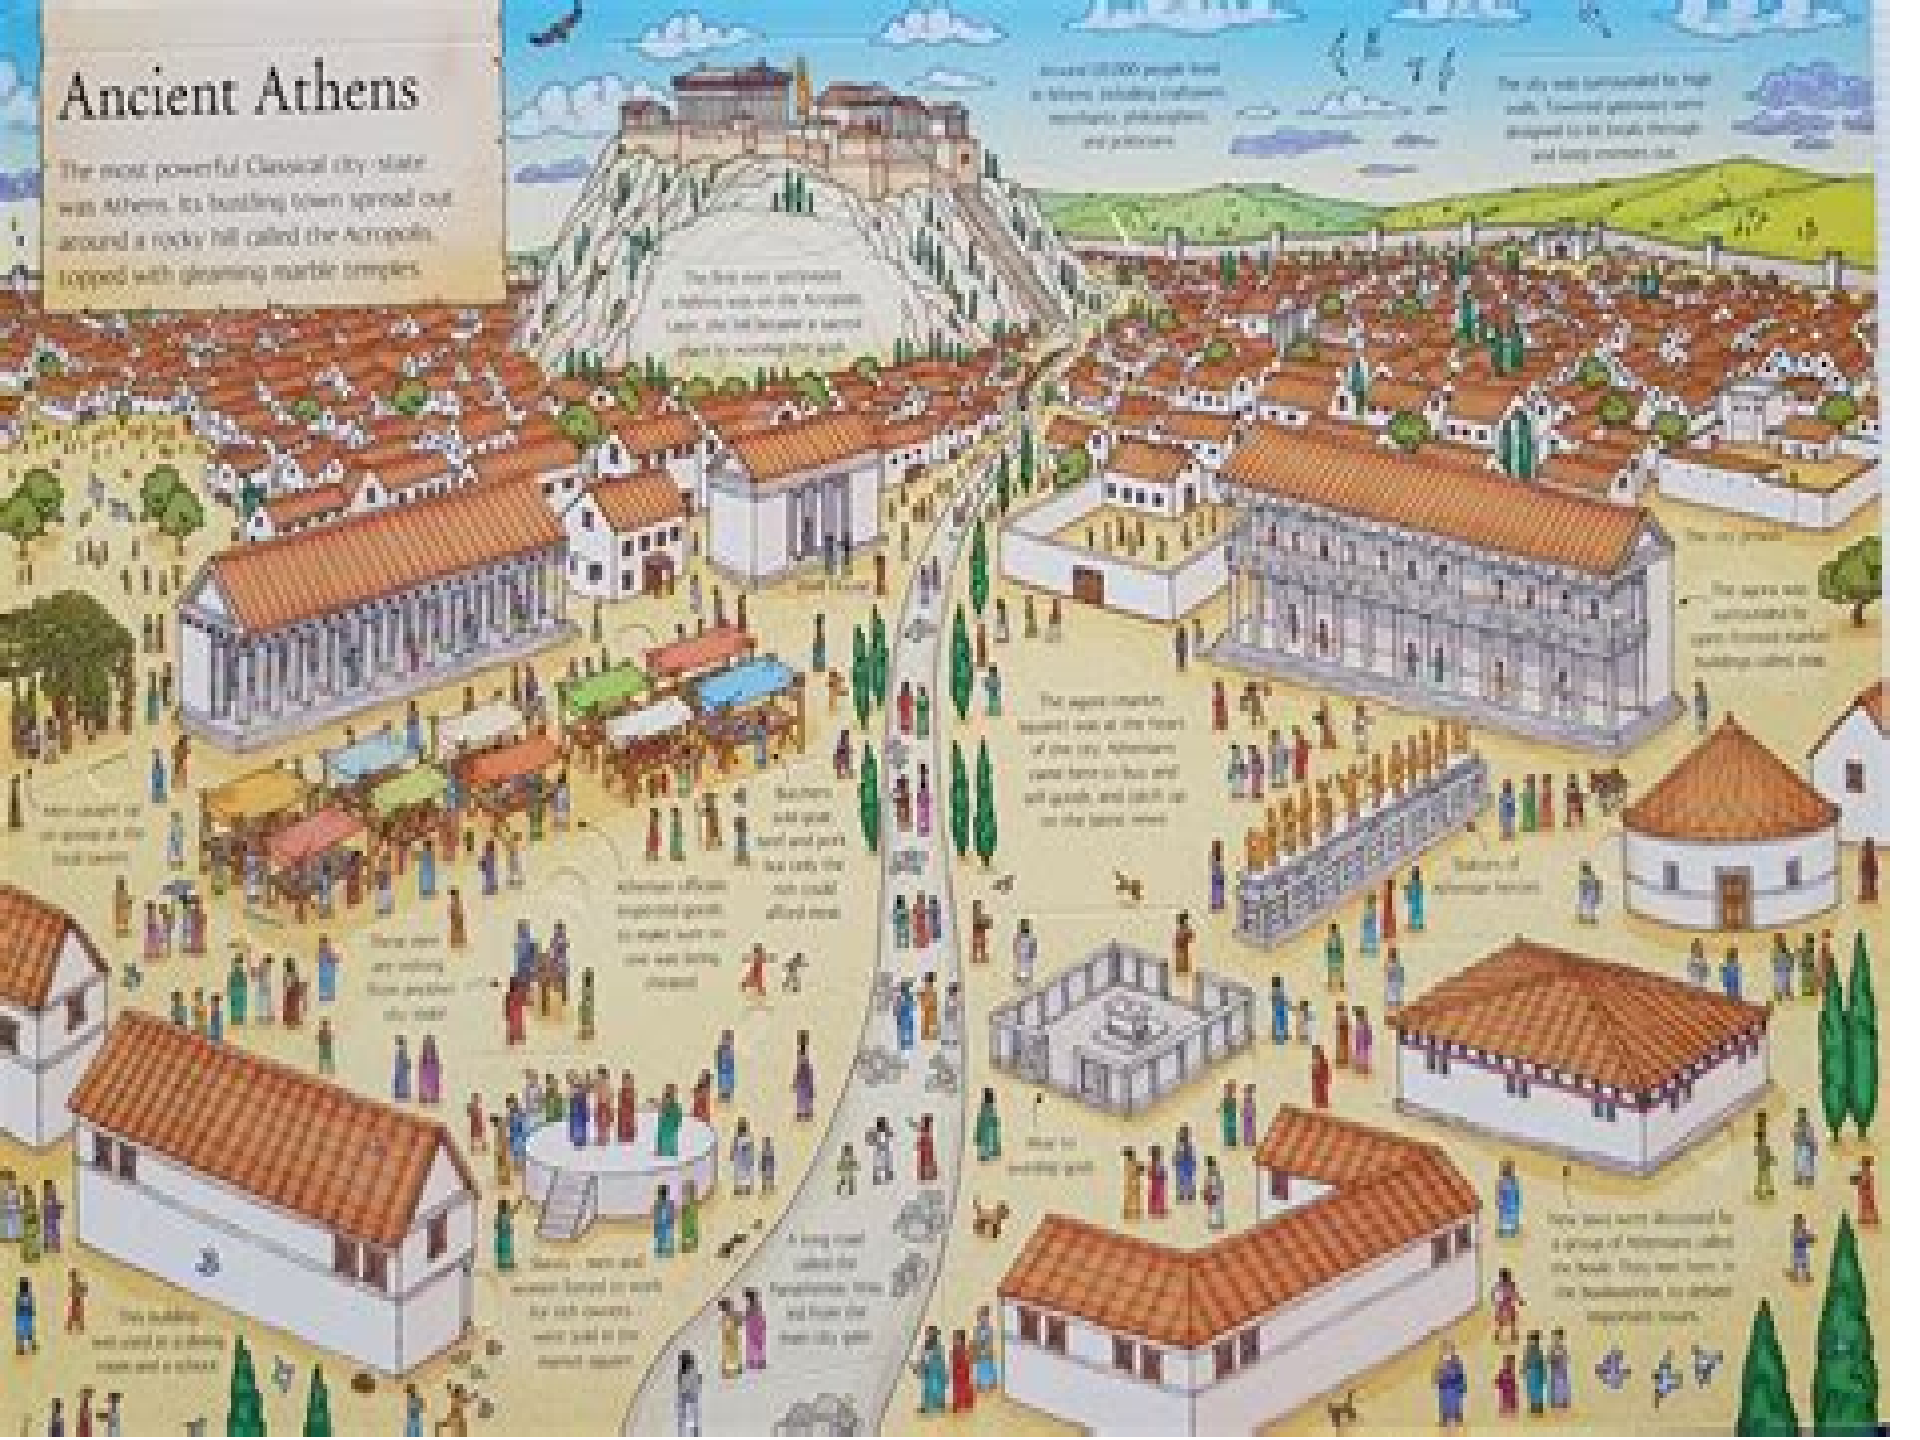

Athenian officials inspected goods to make sure no one was selling counterfeit

Teachers and poets held and gave lectures the rich could afford more

There were no money from outside the state

Men could be on guard at the local courts

This building was used as a library, museum and a school
