Disease Of Cereals And Pulses Raghvendra Singh, Kuldeep Singh, Vishal Singh, 2019-10-30 Symptoms are produced on almost all aerial parts of the wheat plant but are most common on stem leaf sheaths and upper and lower leaf surfaces Uredial pustules or sori are oval to spindle shaped and dark reddish brown rust in color They erupt through the epidermis of the host and are surrounded by tattered host tissue The pustules are dusty in appearance due to the vast number of spores produced Spores are readily released when touched

Breeding Climate Resilient and Future Ready Pulse Crops Manish K. Pandey, M. G. Mallikarjuna, H. C. Lohithaswa, Muraleedhar S. Aski, Sanjeev Gupta, 2025-02-20 This edited volume covers the application of modern breeding tools for developing climate smart pulse crop cultivars The primary focus is on utilizing available genomic resources and next generation breeding technologies such as genome wide association mapping genomic selection genome editing and accelerated breeding pipelines for the rapid development of stress resilient systems specific pulse cultivars Pulses contribute to 10% of global daily protein intake and 5% of energy. Their ability to fix atmospheric nitrogen and serve as an alternative protein source to meat makes them crucial in combating global warming. With the global population expected to reach 9.8 billion by 2050, pulse production needs to increase by at least 70% to meet demand. However, pulse production is facing growing biotic and abiotic challenges exacerbated by climate change. Thus, developing next-generation climate-smart cultivars is essential to ensure food and nutritional security. Recent efforts by global and national breeding communities have led to the discovery of new genomic resources, shifting breeding from phenotype-based to genome-based approaches. These advances integrate rapid generation advancement pipelines with genomic-assisted breeding, trait mapping, and genome editing tools. This book is valuable for agricultural scientists, scholars, and graduate students involved in pulse crop improvement. It also serves as a reference for policymakers and research grant managers in formulating pulse research programs.
