Kinship and Killing Katherine Wills Perlo, 2009 Through close readings of Jewish Christian Islamic and Buddhist texts Katherine Wills Perlo proves that our relationship with animals shapes religious doctrine particularly through the tension between animal exploitation and the bonds of kinship She pinpoints four different strategies for coping with this conflict The first is aggression in which a divinely conferred superiority or karma justifies animal usage The second is evasion which emphasizes benevolent aspects of the human animal relationship within the exploitative structure such as the image of Jesus as a good shepherd The third is defense which acknowledges the problematic nature of killing leading many religions to adopt a propitiation mechanism such as apologizing for sacrifice And the fourth is effective defensive which recognizes animal abuse as inherently unethical As humans feel more empathy toward animals Perlo finds that adherents revise their interpretations of religious texts Preexisting ontologies such as Christianity's changing God or Buddhism's principle of impermanence along with advances in farming practices and technology also encourage changes in treatment As cultures begin to appreciate the different types of perception and consciousness experienced by nonhumans definitions of reality become complicated and humans lean more toward unitary accounts of shared existence These evolving attitudes exert a crucial influence on religious thought Perlo argues moving humans ever closer to a nonspeciesist world identify themselves not by a religion but by their diet These diets are based in diverse sciences such as anthropology ecology systems biology nutritional studies biomedicine and physiology adherents view their diet as a lifestyle a path to enlightenment and a nebulously defined point of health This in turn enables the practitioner to locate themselves in relation to other members of their community to older traditions suffused with religious practice and to understand their praxis in relation to the entire biosphere While on one level this project explores how food health and diet can be a source of spiritual fulfillment on another level Food Faiths illustrates how science and religion are subsumed into a culture and merged to form the basis of an individual's lived spiritual practice [Help!
