The Ends of Literature Brett Levinson, 2001 The Ends of Literature analyzes the part played by literature within contemporary Latin American thought and politics above all the politics of neoliberalism The why of contemporary Latin American literature is the book's overarching concern Its wide range includes close readings of the prose of Cortázar Carpentier Paz Valenzuela Piglia and Las Casas of the relationship of the Boom movement and its aftermath of testimonial narrative and of contemporary Chilean and Chicano film The work also investigates in detail various theoretical projects as they intersect with and emerge from Latin American scholarship cultural studies deconstruction psychoanalysis and postcolonial studies Latin American literature both as a vehicle of conservatism and as an agent of subversion is bound from its inception to the rise of the state Literature's nature role and status are therefore altered when the Latin American nation state succumbs to the process of neoliberalism as the too strong state dictatorship yields to the too weak state the market and as the various practices of civil society and public life are replaced by private or privatized endeavors However neither the end of literature nor the end of the state can be assumed The end of literature in Latin America is in fact the call for more literature it is the call of literature in particular that of the Boom The end of the state likewise is the demand upon this state The book then analyzes the ends in question as at once their purpose direction future and conclusion Also key to the study is the notion of transition Within much recent Latin American political discussion la transición refers to the passage from dictatorship to democracy as well as to the failure of this shift the failure of post dictatorship The author argues that the movement from literary to cultural studies while issuing from intellectual and aesthetic circles is an integral component of this same transition The thematization of the bind between these two displacements hence of Latin America s voyage into post transition forms a fundamental portion of the text

Displaying Reciprocity Jun Xu,2016-10-03 This book is intended to address students researchers and teachers of spoken language It presents an empirical study of task oriented language data in which coparticipants display levels of reciprocity through reactive tokens An in depth investigation of displaying reciprocity is of interest primarily to conversation analysts and pragmaticians involved in the research on talk in interaction in general and Mandarin Chinese conversations in particular The communicative aspect makes this book relevant to the areas of language use While previous research has shown that one single reactive token has different discourse functions in different conversational environments this study shows that participants collaborative orientation to each other s status of displayed reciprocity seems decisive for the selection of reactive tokens rather than one specific reactive token being employed for specific conversational purposes in varying interactional contexts This book also contributes to fields in linguistics pragmatics and sociology which specialize in the investigation of spontaneous human communication
