Model For Calculating Interconnection Costs In Telecommunications:

A Model for Calculating Interconnection Costs in Telecommunications Paul Numba Um, 2004 The proposed cost model takes into account most features characterizing the development stage of telecommunications networks in Sub Saharan Africa small size of fixed network importance of rural telephony excessive reliance on microwave technology explosive demand for mobile service and weak regulatory capacity BOOK JACKET The Liberalisation of the Telecommunications Sector in Sub-Saharan Africa and Fostering Competition in Telecommunications Services Markets Rachel Alemu, 2018-02-02 This study investigates whether the existing regulatory framework governing the telecommunications sector in countries in Sub Saharan Africa effectively deals with emerging competition related concerns in the liberalised sector Using Uganda as a case study it analyses the relevant provisions of the law governing competition in the telecommunications sector and presents three key findings Firstly while there is comprehensive legislation on interconnection and spectrum management inefficient enforcement of the legislation has perpetuated concerns surrounding spectrum scarcity and interconnection Secondly the legislative framework governing anti competitive behaviour though in line with the established principles of competition law is not sufficient Specifically the framework is not equipped to govern the conduct of multinational telecommunications groups that have a strong presence in the telecommunications sector Major factors hampering efficient competition regulation include Uganda's sole reliance on sector specific competition rules restricted available remedies and a regulator with limited experience of enforcing competition legislation The weaknesses in the framework strongly suggest the need to adopt an economy wide competition law Lastly wireless technology is the main means through which the population in Uganda accesses telecommunications services Greater emphasis should be placed on regulating conduct in the wireless communications markets India Telecom 2000: Vol. 1: Telecommunications Policy and Infrastructure , that a central task in the ongoing services negotiations will be to develop a set of rules to ensure that domestic regulations support rather than impede trade liberalization. Since these rules are bound to have a profound impact on the evolution of policy particularly in developing countries it is important that they be conducive to economically rational policy making. This book addresses two central questions: What impact can international trade rules on services have on the exercise of domestic regulatory sovereignty? And how can services negotiations be harnessed to promote and consolidate domestic policy reform across highly diverse sectors? The book with contributions from several of the world's leading experts in the field explores a range of rule making challenges arising at this policy interface in areas such as transparency standards and the adoption of a necessity test for services trade. Contributions also provide an in depth look at these issues in the key areas of accountancy energy finance health telecommunications and transportation services. African Telecommunication Indicators, 2004
