Converse,2017-07-05 Hardly an American today escapes being polled or surveyed or sampled In this illuminating history Jean Converse shows how survey research came to be perhaps the single most important development in twentieth century social science Everyone interested in survey methods and public opinion including social scientists in many fi elds will find this volume a major resource Converse traces the beginnings of survey research in the practical worlds of politics and business where elite groups sought information so as to infl uence mass democratic publics and markets During the Depression and World War II the federal government played a major role in developing surveys on a national scale In the 1940s certain key individuals with academic connections and experience in polling business or government research brought surveys into academic life By the 1960s what was initially viewed with suspicion had achieved a measure of scientific acceptance of survey research The author draws upon a wealth of material in archives interviews and published work to trace the origins of the early organizations the Bureau of Applied Social Research the National Opinion Research Center and the Survey Research Center of Michigan and to capture the perspectives of front line fi gures such as Paul Lazarsfeld George Gallup Elmo Roper and Rensis Likert She writes with sensitivity and style revealing how academic survey research along with its commercial and political cousins came of age in the United States Michigan Farmer and State Journal of Agriculture ,1920 The Agricultural Epitomist ,1901 Host Bibliographic Record for Boundwith Item Barcode 30112118410742 and Others ,1919 American Agriculturist ,1874 American Miller ,1911 Publishers Directory ,1994 Playing House in the American West Cathryn Halverson,2013-11-26 Examines an eclectic group of western women s autobiographical texts canonical and otherwise Playing House in the American West argues for a distinct regional literary tradition characterized by strategic representations of unconventional domestic life The controlling metaphor Cathryn Halverson uses in her engrossing study is playing house From Caroline Kirkland and Laura Ingalls Wilder to Willa Cather and

Marilynne Robinson from the mid nineteenth to the late twentieth centuries western authors have persistently embraced wayward or eccentric housekeeping to prove a woman s difference from western neighbors and eastern readers alike The readings in Playing House investigate the surprising textual ends to which westerners turn the familiar terrain of the home evaluating community arguing for different conceptions of race and class and perhaps most especially resisting traditional gender roles Western women writers Halverson argues render the home as a stage for autonomy resistance and imagination rather than as a site of sacrifice and obligation The western women examined in Playing House in the American West are promoted and read as representatives of a region as insiders offering views of distant and intriguing ways of life even as they conceive of themselves as outsiders By playing with domestic conventions they recast the region they describe portraying the West as a place that fosters female agency individuality and subjectivity Good Housekeeping ,1928
