Indian Painters & White Patrons J. J. Brody, 1971 In this major work of criticism in art and social history Dr Brody demonstrates that modern Indian painting has been until 1962 not a truly native expression derived from aboriginal forms but merely a passive response to White paternalism It has been according to Dr Brody an art produced by Indians for Whites an invention rather than a revival with little or no relationship to earlier pictorial modes and functions among the Indians

Artists and Patrons in Post-war Britain Courtauld Institute of Art, 2017-11-01 This title was first published in 2001 An examination of art and patronage in Britain during the post war years It consists of five case studies initially written as MA theses that closely investigate aspects of the mechanisms of patronage outside the state institutions while indicating structural links within it The writers have sought to elucidate the relationship between patronage the production of art and its dissemination Without seeking to provide an inclusive account of patronage or art production in the early post war years their disparate and highly selective papers set up models for the structure of patronage under specific historical conditions

They assume an understanding that works of art are embedded in their social contexts are products of the conditions under which they were produced and that these contexts and conditions are complex fluid and imbricated in one another

Making Modern Japanese-Style Painting Chelsea Foxwell, 2015-07-20 The Western discovery of Japanese paintings at nineteenth century world's fairs and export shops catapulted Japanese art to new levels of international popularity. With that popularity, however, came criticism as Western writers began to lament a perceived end to pure Japanese art and a rise in westernized cultural hybrids. The Japanese response, nihonga, a traditional style of painting that reframed existing techniques to distinguish them from Western artistic conventions. Making Modern Japanese Style Painting explores the visual characteristics and social functions of nihonga and traces its relationship to the past, its viewers, and emerging notions of the modern Japanese state. Chelsea Foxwell sheds light on interlinked trends in Japanese nationalist discourse, government art policy, American and European commentary on Japanese art, and the demands of export. The seminal artist Kano Hogai (1828-88) is one telling example: originally a painter for the shogun, his art eventually evolved into novel, eerie images meant to satisfy both Japanese and Western audiences. Rather than simply absorbing Western approaches, nihonga as practiced by Hogai and others broke with pre-Meiji painting even as it worked to neutralize the rupture. By arguing that fundamental changes to audience expectations led to the emergence of nihonga, a traditional interpretation of Japanese art for a contemporary international market, Making Modern Japanese Style Painting offers a fresh look at an important aspect of Japan's development into a modern nation.

Painters, Patrons, and Identity J. J. Brody, 2001 This broad and lively anthology reveals the breadth of his influence and the vitality of the field of Native American art history.

Conservation of Easel Paintings Joyce Hill Stoner, Rebecca Rushfield, 2013-02-15 Conservation of Easel Paintings is the first comprehensive text on the history, philosophy, and methods of treatment of easel paintings that combines both theory with practice. With contributions from an international group of experts and interviews with important artists, this volume provides an all-encompassing guide to necessary background knowledge in technical art history, artists' materials, scientific methods of examination and documentation, with sections that present varying approaches and methods for treatment, including consolidation, lining, cleaning, retouching, and varnishing. The book concludes with a section featuring issues of preventive conservation, storage, shipping, exhibition, lighting, safety issues, and public outreach. Conservation of Easel Paintings is a crucial resource in the training of conservation students and will provide generations of practicing paintings conservators and interested art historians, curators, directors, collectors, dealers, artists, and students of art and art history with invaluable information and guidance.
