

Natural Philosophy = Science

The philosophical study of physics, or nature and the physical cosmos, is known as natural philosophy or philosophy of nature. Before the advent of modern science, it ruled.

Non-living things

- Chemistry- The area of science concerned with identifying the compounds that make up matter, researching their characteristics and the ways in which they interact, combine, and change, and using these methods to create new substances.
- Astronomy- The scientific study of matter that exists beyond of Earth's atmosphere, including stars, planets, and their composition and motion. A person who does astronomy is one who examines moon rocks to learn more about their composition.
- Geology- The study of the Earth is called geology. Our understanding of how the Earth has evolved over time can be gained by investigating rocks, geochemistry, and geobiology. We can also predict
