Rural Households In Emerging Societies Technology And Change In Sub Saharan Africa:

Rural Households in Emerging Societies Margaret Haswell,Diana Hunt,2020-12-17 The constantly changing circumstances of rural life in sub Saharan Africa have brought with them both successes and failures The essays in this volume examine the various pressures and inducements to changing resource use patterns faced by rural households and explore the two way causal relationship between technology and technological change on the one hand and other key elements of rural change demographic environmental economic social and political on the other Contemporary approaches to the introduction of technical innovations are examined and new approaches are proposed Through case studies of particular communities the wide ranging impacts of past experiences are assessed and the causes and consequences of indigenous initiatives are explored Renewing Development in Sub-Saharan Africa Deryke Belshaw,the late Arthur Ian

Livingstone,2005-06-29 Renewing Development in Sub Saharan Africa reviews the debates and brings together specialist contributions to provide a clear guide to the major complexities of African development They lay the foundation for designing a range of individual country specific policy sets in which the strategic components are prioritized according to each country s constraints and opportunities The emphasis of the book is on the identification of effective strategies that will enable individual countries to most effectively exploit their growth opportunities and to meet poverty reducing and other key equity objectives Bibliography of Agriculture with Subject Index ,1993 The Palgrave Companion to Oxford

Economics Robert A. Cord,2021-06-16 The University of Oxford has been and continues to be one of the most important global centres for economics With six chapters on themes in Oxford economics and 24 chapters on the lives and work of Oxford economists this volume shows how economics became established at the University how it produced some of the world s best known economists including Francis Ysidro Edgeworth Roy Harrod and David Hendry and how it remains a global force for the very best in teaching and research in economics With original contributions from a stellar cast this volume provides economists especially those interested in macroeconomics and the history of economic thought with the first in depth analysis of Oxford economics Is Bullock Traction a Sustainable Technology? Johann H. Hesse,1997-11 This study examines the question of whether or not the technology of bullock traction has spread in northern Ghana between 1982 83 and 1993 94 and furthermore what factors determine changes in the pattern of the adoption of bullock traction in this area The introduction to the problem and the objectives of the study in chapter one are followed by a theoretical section in chapter two that focuses on the question why one would have expected a further spread of bullock traction This chapter explains the direct benefits of bullock traction and reviews the current state of knowledge of this issue Factors that might have resulted in changes in these direct benefits of bullock traction between 1982 83 and 1993 94 such as population growth and the effects of structural adjustment programs are discussed Additionally the implications of the life cycle of households and the tradition of the inheritance of cattle for changes related to bullock traction adoption over time are identified Chapter three introduces the empirical data collection procedure and methods The study is a follow up study to the study of Panin 1988 who conducted research on the same farm households in 1982 83 in three villages of the Northern Region of Ghana Chapter four presents the empirical findings about the changes in the socio economic conditions that are relevant for bullock traction adoption in the study villages These data extend the information in chapter two to the village level The empirical findings about changes in the effects of bullock traction at the field level are presented in chapter five The analysis includes the effects of bullock traction on land use household labor utilization performance of crop production and aspects of bullock traction renting The effects of bullock traction at the farm household level were addressed in chapter six It is necessary to separate the analysis at the field level from the farm household level analysis because farmers combine different tillage technologies at the farm household level This chapter includes changes over time regarding household demographics resource endowment farm labor allocation crop production performance income statements and the costs and benefits of an investment in bullock traction Chapter seven of this study is concerned with the question of whether the changes in the bullock ownership pattern for the sampled households are in line with general trends at village level For this purpose the village census of 1994 was compared with 1982 and the result is that the ownership of bullocks and implements has declined which means that the results of the analysis at farm household level is in line with general trends at village level Although individual ownership of bullock traction declined the area plowed by bullocks in the study area increased because renting of bullock traction services increased Chapter eight of the study discusses important empirical results of chapters four to seven in light of the arguments made in the theoretical chapter two and draws attention to the conclusions of the empirical results Important points discussed in chapter eight are methodological issues the labor saving effect of bullock traction that is maintained over the years the effect on crop yields that was found to exist in 1982 but not in 1994 the importance of the life cycle of households to understand changes in bullock traction adoption at farm household level and the effects of structural adjustment programs on the adoption of bullock traction The study ends with the formulation of recommendations for agricultural extension and further agricultural research About the Author International Policy Studies Curriculum Stuart S. Lessons from Uganda on Strategies to Fight Poverty John Mackinnon,Ritva Reinikka,2000 The New Peasantries Jan Douwe van der Ploeg,2012-05-23 This book explores the position role and significance of the peasantry in an era of globalization particularly of the agrarian markets and food industries It argues that the peasant condition is characterized by a struggle for autonomy that finds expression in the creation and development of a self governed resource base and associated forms of sustainable development In this respect the peasant mode of farming fundamentally differs from entrepreneurial and corporate ways of farming The author demonstrates that the peasantries are far from waning Instead both industrialized and developing countries are witnessing complex and richly chequered processes of re peasantization with peasants now numbering over a billion worldwide The author s arguments are based on three longitudinal studies in Peru Italy and The Netherlands that span 30 years and provide original and thought provoking insights into rural and agrarian development processes The book combines and integrates different bodies of literature the rich traditions of peasant studies development sociology rural sociology neo institutional economics and the recently emerging debates on Empire      Revolutionizing Development Andrea Cornwall,Ian Scoones,2022-03-28 This book tells the story of development studies in practice over the last fifty years through the work of one remarkable individual Robert Chambers His work has taken him from being a colonial officer in Kenya through training and managing large rural development projects to a fundamental critique of top down development and the championing of participatory approaches The contributors eloquently demonstrate how he has been at the centre of major shifts in development thinking and practice over this period popularising terms that are now at the centre of the development lexicon such as vulnerability multi dimensional poverty sustainable livelihoods and farmer first Robert Chambers played a major role in the massive growth in participatory approaches to development and particularly the application of participatory methods in development research and appraisal This has led to fundamental challenges to development practice ranging from approaches to monitoring and evaluation to institutional learning and professional training There is probably no one who has had more influence on approaches to development in the past decades Revolutionizing Development offers a unique overview of these contributions in thirty two concise chapters from authors who have been intimately involved as collaborators critics and colleagues of Robert Chambers      How the World Hunger Problem Was not Solved Christian Gerlach,2024-02-14 The world food crisis 1972 1975 gave rise to new development concepts To eradicate world hunger small peasants were supposed to use modern inputs like high yielding seeds fertilizer pesticides and irrigation This would turn subsistence producers into business owners transform rural areas invigorate national economies and the crisis stricken world economy and thus stabilize capitalism Together with an in depth account of the world food crisis this book analyses how this global scheme largely failed It shows its diverse initiators their reasoning and motives its political breakthrough the degrees to which it was implemented globally and nationally in the following decades and its socioeconomic effects in rural areas Despite internationally coordinated policies and coercive means the scheme failed on all levels situation analysis design policies incapable institutions including big business implementation and peasants responses Selective realization in certain regions and for certain crops and the appropriation of funds by local elites often aggravated inequality and hunger Case studies are about Bangladesh Indonesia Tanzania and Mali The book shows limits to global social engineering imperialism and state control It is aimed at students scholars activists and non specialists interested in development and the world food problem The Open Access version of this book available at <http://www.taylorfrancis.com> has been made available under a Creative Commons Attribution Non Commercial No Derivatives CC BY NC ND 4 0 license      The Economics of Animal Health and Production Jonathan Rushton,2009 The efficient functioning of the livestock sector encompassing all facets of input supply production processing
