Cerri,2012-12-06 In April 1993 an interdisciplinary NATO Advanced Research Workshop on Collaborative dialogue technologies in distance learning was held in Segovia Spain The workshop brought together researchers in fields related to distance learning using computer mediated communication The statement of justification of the NATO ARW follows hereafter

Justification of the NATO Advanced Research Workshop on Collaborative Dialogue Technologies in Distance Learning Computer Mediated Communication CMC systems have features that reduce some temporal physical and social constraints on communication Theories of communication have shifted from viewing communication as a linear transmission of messages by a sender to a receiver to viewing it as a social paradigm where individuals are actors in a network of interdependent relationships embedded in organizational and social structures Recent research focuses on models of information sharing to support not only the activities of individuals but also the problem solving activities of groups such as decision making planning or co writing This area of research is called Computer Supported Cooperative Work CSCW The Artificial Intelligence AI approach uses knowledge based systems to enhance and facilitate all these processes including the possibility of using natural language The traditional model of distance education places a strong emphasis on independent study supported by well developed learning materials This model can be characterized as one way media However the potential of CMC to provide better guidance to the student in Higher Distance Education has been quickly recognized for at least two kind of activities information sharing and interaction

Critical Education Against Global Capitalism Paula Allman,2019-04-09 In today's vernacular Marx outed capitalism well over a century ago however his explanation has been both ignored and misinterpreted by not only his detractors but also by many socialists and even a considerable number of Marxists as well Today we are experiencing the full impact and suffering the repercussions of capitalism's inherent need to grow and become more than ever before a fully internationalized and integrated system of socioeconomic control and domination the global system that many commentators have suddenly remembered Marx and Engels 1848 presciently forecasted in the Communist Manifesto When the Berlin Wall fell in 1989 the victory of capitalism and liberal democracy was triumphantly proclaimed The Cold War was over and we were promised a lasting peace As we entered the third millennium the promise of peace was brutally dashed and humanity now appears to have entered a state of permanent war We have just witnessed the near total collapse of the global financial system and are continuing to experience as we will for years to come the collateral damage this crisis has caused Problems we were facing before the current crisis will be exacerbated escalating social and economic divisions jobless growth injustice and oppression together with an environment in varying stages of degradation Daily on television news we are bombarded by the schizoid media images of capitalism's extremes the ravaged faces and wasted bodies of some of the thousands suffering famine or the millions living in the world's slums followed within a blink of the eye by the gleaming yet vacuous smile and sumptuously adorned figure of some extravagant wealthy individual who is one of the select members of the global upper class Are we becoming conditioned to accept such contrasts and regard them as normal and inevitable at a time when we have the potential to eliminate scarcity and eradicate human deprivation The author argues that revolutionary critical education is needed to inform and form a social movement capable of challenging and then transforming capitalism She also offers an accessible account of Marx's dialectical critique and exposés of capitalism clearly demonstrating the real enemy that should be the focus of anti capitalist and anti globalization struggles This is an account that explains why our focus should not be on greedy individual capitalists Wall Street financial institutions particular multinational corporations national governments or even their handmaiden institutions such as the World Bank IMF WTO etc but instead the global network of capitalist socioeconomic relations and consequent habituated human practices in which we are all involved These together with the historically specific form of capitalist wealth are the real enemy the essence of capitalism that must be abolished in order for humanity to have any hope of social and economic justice in the future The Education Feminism Reader Lynda Stone, Gail Masuchika Boldt, 1994 This anthology includes some of the most important and influential essays in feminist education theory since the late 70s Contributors are drawn from traditional liberal feminists radical postmodern theorists and those with psychological philosophical and political agendas Paulo Freire in the 21st Century Peter Roberts, 2015-10-23 This book explores the implications of world renowned educationalist Paulo Freire's theories for educational practice and how his ideas can help in bridging different genres and traditions It addresses themes questions and issues that have received little attention to date including Freire's conception of the critical intellectual the problem of defining literacy and the possibility of a Freirean response to debates over political correctness Roberts also relates Freire's ideas to those of other writers Israel Scheffler Fyodor Dostoevsky and Hermann Hesse among others Paulo Freire in the 21st Century makes a distinctive contribution to the international literature on Freire's work

An Appraisal of Batswana Extension Agents' Work and Training Experiences

Rebecca N. Lekoko, 2002 Hermeneutic phenomenological interviews were conducted to explore community based extension workers CBEWs previous work and training experiences and how such experiences contributed to their present working relationships as partners in community development CBEWs responses foreshadowed challenges and problems of coordination that could have otherwise been addressed had they been considered integral elements of previous training curricula The findings throw light on how government policies though explicitly formulated to enhance conditions of service coordination can be in variance with realities of coordination at the village level Awareness of the fissure of policies and actual coordination does not refute the importance of government intervention in community development given CBEWs status as government employees Rather it is only with understanding of and familiarity with CBEWs circumstances that such policies would truly address the challenges problems and possibilities of effective coordination CBEWs comments reflected both awareness and learned understanding of social and political complexities surrounding their work as partners in community development Authority and interventions such as political interference illiterate communities enlightened communities and passive and negative attitudes complicate their working together resulting in problems of resistance rejection and other tensions that defeat the spirit of working together Meaningful acceptance of community development as a collective undertaking needs to be backed by a deliberate unification of CBEWs through centrally organized training Such training programs must not only illuminate the lived experiences of CBEWs as they work among themselves and with other community based groups in the villages but also provide opportunities for CBEWs to take active roles by engaging in activities such as placements in authentic work settings mini interdisciplinary groupings of CBEWs with local communities and other team activities There will be no end to the reservoir of learning if intentional efforts are made to incorporate local knowledge and needs that is immediate challenges problems and needs of CBEWs as they work with the local communities Further effective coordination requires basic skills of communication leadership and management personal and human relations technical skills and relevant attitudinal orientations The features described here are not exhaustive but have in common the intent of making training programs truly sensitive to CBEWs needs as partners in community development
