Manufacturing 'Bad Mothers'

Karen Swift, 1995-04-27 Child neglect has been characterized over the past century as a problem of deficient care of children by mothers A complex and punitive child welfare system has emerged based on a view that the children of these mothers require legally sanctioned rescue by those better suited to care for them Karen Swift challenges both the accepted view of child neglect and the present official response to it Beginning from a critical theoretical perspective she argues that our usual perceptions of neglect hide and distort important social realities This distorted perception only serves to reproduce the conditions of poverty marginalization and violence in which these families live The current child welfare system far from rescuing neglected children helps instead to ensure the continuation of their problems and the outcome is especially dramatic and damaging in Aboriginal communities Swift explores the historical organizational and professional dimensions within which child neglect becomes a visible social reality Also examined are relations of class race and gender embedded in our usual understanding of child neglect The discussion shows how these relations are continually reproduced through ordinary everyday work practices of social workers and others who deal with mothers accused of child neglect The good parent model through which help and authority are apparently merged continually indicates that the mothers are unworthy of help Their own experience disappears as they are faced with procedures designed to examine their present suitability for the job of parenting The same procedures produce children as actually being helped through the exertion of state authority over their parents but most of the help provided children is theoretical and some of it is quite damaging Swift also looks at both current and alternative notions of helping families Finally she argues that each of us can help to transform oppressive social realities The Missionary Review of the World ,1923

Patterns of Child Abuse Michael Karson,Elizabeth Sparks,2013-09-13 Interpret the hidden meaning of family roles to help children at risk Because dysfunctional patterns are closed systems that serve a secret purpose they are almost impossible to change from the outside Patterns of Child Abuse helps you recognize the purpose behind the patterns and offers successful strategies for entering the pattern in order to help family members without joining it and becoming part of the dysfunction Patterns of Child Abuse identifies the most common most problematic patterns and explores their hidden meanings Case studies and theoretical discussions demonstrate the ways family patterns are replicated in a child s psyche and the ways the grown up child replicates the familiar family pattern forcing the world to bend to the story within Synthesizing systems theory behaviorism and psychoanalysis Patterns of Child Abuse offers powerful insights as well as practical strategies for dealing with such complex issues as how to comfort an abused child who cannot bear to be touched why abused children idealize their battering or neglectful parent how borderline personality organization affects individuals and their families handling the sexually powerful teenage girl the disruptive boy and the mother of the sexual abuse victim how family patterns operate in therapeutic context why therapists and social workers may encounter conflicts in child welfare cases when and how paradoxical interventions can work Well written and insightful Patterns of Child Abuse conveys a sound theoretical model and a sophisticated approach to the psychology of individuals and families for the child welfare professional

Lady Eugenist Victoria C. Woodhull,2005 Francis Galton is said to have founded eugenics with an 1864 magazine article But a single article does not make a movement and Galton by his own admission did little to promote the idea before 1901 This book demonstrates that eugenists have given us an inaccurate history of their movement assigning credit to Galton the eminent half cousin of Charles Darwin when the real credit belongs to a woman who was perhaps the most radical nineteenth century American feminist That woman was Victoria Woodhull the first woman to run for U S President and with her sister the first woman stockbroker on Wall Street This book contains all her major speeches and writings on eugenics showing that she was the first of either sex to take to the road and in hundreds of speeches across the U S champion the idea of creating a perfected humanity by breeding perfect children She even beat Galton in his own land moving to England in 1876 and introducing eugenics there Woodhull was not a shy about her role The title for this book comes from the headline of a 1912 London newspaper article proclaiming her Lady Eugenist In 1927 shortly before she died the New York Times would carry an article in which she praised eugenic sterilization and claimed to have advocated that fifty years ago in my book
