

A MIXTURE OF FRAILTIES

BY

~~Robertson Davies~~
Robertson Davies

*Nothing softens the Arrogance of our Nature like a Mixture of some Frailties. It is by them that we are best told, that we must not strike too hard upon others.
Because we ourselves do so often deserve blows, They pull our Rage by the sleeve and whisper
Gentleness to us in our rancours. MONTAIGNE*

Robertson Davies Val Ross,2009-02-24 National bestseller and a Globe and Mail Best Book A fascinating larger than life character Davies left a treasure trove of stories about him when he died in 1995 expertly arranged here into a revealing portrait From his student days onward Robertson Davies made a huge impression on those around him He was so clearly bound for a glorious future that some young friends even carefully preserved his letters And everyone remembered their encounters with him Later in life as a world famous writer perhaps Canada's pre eminent man of letters who looked like Jehovah he attracted people eager to meet him who also vividly remembered their meetings So when Val Ross set out in search of people's memories she was faced with a wonderful embarrassment of riches The one hundred or so contributors here range very widely There are family memories of course and memories from colleagues in the academic world who knew him as a professor and the founding master of Massey College at the University of Toronto Predictably there are other major writers like Margaret Atwood and John Irving Less predictably there are people from the world of Hollywood such as Norman Jewison and David Cronenberg who remembers Davies on set peering through a camera lens as he researched his newest novel And we even hear from his barber and from his gardener Theo Henkenhaf Some speakers contribute just a lively paragraph others several pages Yet all of them through the magic of Val Ross's art help to create an intriguing full colour portrait of a complex man beloved by millions of readers around the world

Robertson Davies Camille R. La Bossière,Linda M. Morra,2001 This collection of essays on the writing of Robertson Davies addresses the basic problems in reading his work by looking at the topics of doubling disguise irony paradox and dwelling in gaps or spaces in between The essays present new insights on a broad range of topics in Davies oeuvre and represent one of the first major discussions devoted to Davies work since his death in 1995 Published in English

A Celtic Temperament Robertson Davies,2015-10-06 Versatile and prolific

Robertson Davies was an actor journalist and newspaper publisher playwright essayist founding master of Massey College at the University of Toronto and one of Canada's greatest novelists. He was also an obsessive complex and self-revealing diarist. His diaries, which he began as a teenager, grew to over 3 million words and are an astonishing literary legacy. This first published selection of his diaries spans 1959 to 1963, years in which Davies in mid-life experienced both daunting failure and unexpected success. Born in Thamesville, Ontario, in 1913, he was educated at local schools, then Upper Canada College, Queen's University, and Oxford University. He worked in England at the famous Old Vic theatre as an actor and literary advisor before returning to Canada, where he became the editor and publisher of the Peterborough Examiner, established himself as a prominent Canadian playwright, and published his first three novels, now known as the Salterton Trilogy. By 1959, at the age of forty-five, Robertson Davies was already one of Canada's leading literary figures. Even so, the diaries show that he was frustrated by the limitations of his literary success, often exasperated with the distractions of his daily life and buffeted by his mental and emotional state. They also show that he enjoyed life, was deeply interested in the society he lived in, and in the people he encountered. More often than not, he found comedy in the world around him and delighted in recording it. He kept not only a daily journal but also more focused diaries, such as his accounts of the Toronto and New York production of his play Love and Libel, when he worked closely with the great British director Tyrone Guthrie, and of the founding of Massey College, the brainchild of Vincent Massey. The descriptions of backstage and academic politics are invariably entertaining, but in his diaries, Davies also reveals himself as intensely self-critical, frequently insecure, and with a highly changeable nature that he described as his Celtic temperament. We also see him as a partner in an intensely happy and creative marriage and as a man with an astonishing capacity for hard work. By the end of 1963, his life had taken a new direction. As master of Massey College, he finds himself a public figure, but he is increasingly preoccupied with a new novel he wants to write, which he is calling Fifth Business. The publication of A Celtic Temperament establishes Robertson Davies as one of the great diarists. In their range, variety, intimacy, and honesty, his diaries present an extraordinarily rich portrait of the man and his times.

The Smaller Infinity Patricia Monk, 1982-12-15 The concepts of the Jungian theory of personality have long held considerable interest for Robertson Davies both outside his fiction and as the explicit subject of The Manticore This interpretive study discusses Davies use of Jungian psychology as both a structural and a thematic device and touches on related themes of illusion and the nature of reality Drawing extensively on early reviews and articles Monk sketches the background to Davies preoccupation with psychology revealing its influence on his early writings including the effect of the Jungian concept of the persona on Shakespeare's Boy Actors and the concept of the shadow on the Samuel Marchbanks material She also notes the introduction of the important themes of illusion as a mask for reality and ambivalence which are extended in the Salterton trilogy Fifth Business and The Manticore Monk concludes that World of Wonders reveals an apparent but unsuccessful attempt on Davies part to get away from Jungian psychology and an exploration of alternative myths of human identity the romance myth of the hero and the Spenglerian myth of the Magian soul
