ecosystems do into architectural and urban design is a step towards the creation and evolution of cities that are radically more sustainable and potentially regenerative Can cities produce their own food energy and water Can they be designed to regulate climate provide habitat cycle nutrients and purify water air and soil This book examines and defines the field of biomimicry for sustainable built environment design and goes on to translate ecological knowledge into practical methodologies for architectural and urban design that can proactively respond to climate change and biodiversity loss These methods are tested and exemplified through a series of case studies of existing cities in a variety of climates Regenerative Urban Design and Ecosystem Biomimicry will be of great interest to students professionals and researchers of architecture urban design ecology and environmental studies as well as those interested in the interdisciplinary study of sustainability ecology and urbanism
