Menes, 1976 HIV, Resurgent Infections and Population Change in Africa Michel Caraël, Judith Glynn, 2008-08-12 Forty years ago the age old battle against infectious diseases as a major threat to human health was believed close to being won However by the late twentieth century the increase of emerging and reemerging infectious diseases was evident in both low and high income countries About 30 new infectious diseases have been identified in the last 20 years Among the new diseases and most importantly the Human Immunodeficiency Virus HIV epidemic with 40 million persons infected and 25 million deaths since its first description presents one of the most significant health societal and security challenges facing the global community The interaction of HIV AIDS with tuberculosis malaria and bacterial infections have increased HIV related morbidity and mortality and in turn the HIV pandemic has brought about devastating increases in tuberculosis Understanding the population impact and the dynamics of infection diseases in the most affected region is critical to efforts to reduce the morbidity and mortality of such infections and for decisions on where to use limited resources in the fight against infections This book aims to contribute to these efforts by offering a demographic and epidemiological perspective on emerging and reemerging infections in sub Saharan Africa Prospective Community Studies in Developing Countries Monica Das Gupta, 1997 This book presents an overview of the leading prospective studies in developing countries in population and health research Prospective community studies are concerned with the understanding of the incidence of birth disease and death The leading practitioners in this field present the methodologies they have developed and summarize the major findings of their studies Since many of these methodologies have never been documented and the results are scattered in different publications the volume provides a great deal of valuable information which is difficult to locate Thus it will be an indispensable guide to researchers in the field of prospective studies and will also be helpful as a teaching aid It is a unique

compendium of reflective accounts of prospective research which has been so fundamental to many major innovations regarding the way demographic behaviour is observed monitored and analysed It also provides a comprehensive account of the substantive contribution of prospective studies which include some innovative and seminal findings on community health The debate on the most efficient kinds of surveys is still ongoing and some of the surveys are still in progress too The book will be of great interest for demographers public health researchers family planners and survey specialists

Characteristics, patterns and drivers of rural migration in Senegal The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations ,2020-03-01 Although migratory flows from rural areas are a common phenomenon in most developing countries we possess little information on their dynamics and determinants In this context in September 2017 in the framework of the project Fostering productive investments to create decent farm and non farm jobs for rural youth in migration prone areas in Senegal FAO and the Senegalese National Agency of Statistics and Demography ANSD conducted a household survey with the aim of generating information on migration phenomena in rural areas The survey results described in this study contribute to broadening the available knowledge base on the causes and dynamics of rural migration and aim to inform sectoral economic policies youth employment and rural development policies The Greenwood Encyclopedia of Children's Issues Worldwide Irving Epstein,2007-12-30 From the skyrocketing AIDS rate in Haiti to the oppressive pollution in industrial China from the violent street culture of Nigeria to the crippling poverty in Nicaragua from child trafficking in Thailand to child marriages in India this jam packed six volume set explores all these issues and more in an unprecedented look at the world s children at the dawn of the 21st century In recent years while many countries have enjoyed a higher standard of living and improved working conditions others have been torn apart by war and incapacitated by famine and are struggling to improve life for their children and their future Recent concern over the world s children has resulted in a global attempt to define what constitutes an acceptable childhood New attention has been paid not only to healthcare and secondary education but also to the right to play and increased access to technology The UN s codification of children s rights has done much to expand our understanding of what is needed for healthy growth and development of children and youth Organized by region The Greenwood Encyclopedia of Children s Issues Worldwide is the first globally focused set of this magnitude offering extensive up to date coverage of these critical issues Original chapters accessibly synthesize current data on key topics including education play and recreation child labor family health laws and legal status religious life abuse and neglect and growing up in the 21st century International Handbook of Adult Mortality Richard G. Rogers,Eileen M. Crimmins,2011-02-18 This handbook presents a comprehensive and up to date overview of unprecedented substantive theoretical methodological and statistical developments and insights and an in depth examination of trends and patterns in adult mortality around the world With over two dozen chapters and more than 50 authors this volume draws from top international mortality experts to provide one of the best overviews of life expectancy extant The book documents remarkable gains in life expectancy which stand out as one of the most important accomplishments of the twentieth century. Individuals in more developed countries can expect to live longer now than ever before, especially the Japanese who enjoy record setting life expectancies. The book also explores unfortunate declines in life expectancy in selected countries brought on by such factors as infectious diseases, accidents, suicides and homicides, and political and economic conflict and turmoil. This book synthesizes the wealth of mortality information available, clearly articulates the central findings to date, identifies the most appropriate datasets and methods currently available, illuminates the central research questions, and develops an agenda to address these research questions. The authors carefully examine central factors related to mortality including health behaviors, socioeconomic status, social relations, biomarkers, and genetic factors. The book will prove especially relevant to researchers, students, and policy makers within social and health sciences who want to better understand international trends and patterns in adult mortality.

International encyclopedia of adolescence Jeffrey Jensen Arnett, 2007. Publisher description: Transactional Culture in Colonial Dakar, 1902-44 Rachel M. Petrocelli, 2024. Examines Dakar's transformation from a small colonial capital to a dynamic city, highlighting how its resourceful residents challenged French control by forging adaptive economic relationships. During a transformative era in the first half of the twentieth century, Dakar, former capital of French West Africa and present day capital of Senegal, evolved from a small colonial capital meant to serve the French administration to a dynamic city shaped not solely by colonial planners but also by its resourceful inhabitants. In this important book, historian Rachel Petrocelli introduces the concept of transactional culture, a set of norms and practices forged by Dakar's residents to navigate life under colonial rule. A central element of that culture was transience, a defining feature permeating various facets of life in Dakar, from commerce and employment to housing and interactions with the state. The book uncovers a central dynamic: economic relationships in Dakar were continually molded by the ebb and flow of diverse individuals, each pursuing their own objectives despite the relentless efforts of the French state to exert control. Both Europeans and Africans embraced adaptability in Dakar, over fixed residence, while immigrant communities implanted themselves and became integral to the city's transactional culture. In this examination based on court records and other sources, Petrocelli shows that as the French colonial state sought to shape and control Dakar, it enacted policies to intentionally limit city dwellers' resources. Strategies like pawning possessions and taking out credit, creatively devising housing, and mobilizing identities and affiliations emerged as a result, integrating Dakarais of every background. These practices persisted long after French rule ended, underscoring the enduring impact of Dakar's colonial history.

Area Handbook for Senegal Harold D. Nelson, 1974. Africa United Nations Environment Programme, 2008. This stunning 400 page Atlas is a unique and powerful publication which brings to light stories of environmental change at more than 100 locations spread across every country in Africa. There are more than 300 satellite images, 300 ground photographs, and 150 maps, along with informative graphs and charts that give a vivid visual portrayal of Africa and its changing environment that provide scientific evidence of the impact that natural and human activities have had on the continent's environment over the past several decades. The observations and measurements of environmental change help gauge the extent of progress made by African countries towards reaching the United Nations Millennium Development Goals. More importantly, this book contributes to the knowledge and understanding that are essential for adaptation and remediation and should be of immense value to all those who want to know more about Africa and who care about the future of this continent. Wildlife Review

,1995 Societies and Nature in the Sahel Philippe Lavigne Delville, Emmanuel Gregoire, Pierre Janin, Claude Raynaud, Jean Koechlin, 2002-06 Examining the conditions for land occupation and natural resource use in the Sahel, this book offers a conceptual and practical approach to social organization and environmental management in the face of rapid environmental change. Senegal Momar Coumba Diop, 1993 Thirteen chapters present the debate among Senegalese academics undertaking a multi-faceted analysis of the social, political, and economic development of their country with the aim of finding innovative answers to Senegal's current predicament. The major trends from 1960-1990 are identified and factors contributing to the shift from a state intervention system to a liberalism which deconstructs some of the achievements of the immediate post-independence period. The different discourses of politicians and the various stakes underlying these are revealed here plainly. The book also displays the complex relations between the political, economic, and social areas, the conflicts, alliances between various legitimate bodies. Within this context, a reconstruction of the self-delusions on which some groups feed and still feed is made. With this novel light shed on the specificities of the Senegalese crisis, the ways and means whereby the ruling class faces this situation can be identified, although its manoeuvring margin has severely shrunk.
