Preparing The Us Army For Homeland Security Concepts Issues And Options:

Preparing the U.S. Army for Homeland Security Eric V. Larson, John E. Peters, 2001-03-26 Homeland security encompasses five distinct missions domestic preparedness and civil support in case of attacks on civilians continuity of government continuity of military operations border and coastal defense and national missile defense This report extensively details four of those mission areas national missile defense having been covered in great detail elsewhere The authors define homeland security and its mission areas provide a methodology for assessing homeland security response options and review relevant trend data for each mission area They also assess the adequacy of the doctrine organizations training leadership materiel and soldier systems and provide illustrative scenarios to help clarify Army planning priorities The report concludes with options and recommendations for developing more cost effective programs and recommends a planning framework that can facilitate planning to meet homeland security needs

Preparing the U.S. Army for Homeland Security Concepts, Issues, and Options, 2001 This report addresses the many conceptual programmatic and practical issues associated with an emergent mission area for the U S Army and Department of Defense DoD called homeland security until recently the mission was known as homeland defense At the most basic level the report seeks to provide Army and other DoD audiences with an introduction to and overview of four of the five homeland security task areas and the various organizations at the federal state and local level that the Army and DoD may need to interface with under different circumstances More ambitiously it seeks to define homeland security in a concrete way and to provide the necessary background and conceptual and analytic constructs for wrestling with the key issues and choices the Army will face as the mission area matures The research reported here was initiated as homeland security was emerging as an issue of policy concern and was conducted during Fiscal Year 1999 a year in which the Army and Department of Defense considered but had not yet resolved many key homeland security related issues These include a definition of homeland security the key task areas that constitute homeland security and the programs and capabilities needed to respond to these various threats In a similar vein the broader federal government enacted or refined numerous programs to combat terrorism and weapons of mass destruction and to mitigate the threat to critical infrastructure
