Nye,2004-09-17 An exploration of the dialogue that emerged after

1776 between different visions of what it meant to use new technologies to transform the land After 1776 the former American colonies began to reimagine themselves as a unified self created community Technologies had an important role in the resulting national narratives and a few technologies assumed particular prominence Among these were the axe the mill the canal the railroad and the irrigation dam In this book David Nye explores the stories that clustered around these technologies In doing so he rediscovers an American story of origins with America conceived as a second creation built in harmony with God s first creation While mainstream Americans constructed technological foundation stories to explain their place in the New World however marginalized groups told other stories of destruction and loss Native Americans protested the loss of their forests fishermen resisted the construction of dams and early environmentalists feared the exhaustion of resources A water mill could be viewed as the kernel of a new community or as a new way to exploit labor If passengers comprehended railways as part of a larger narrative about American expansion and progress many farmers attacked railroad land grants To explore these contradictions Nye devotes alternating chapters to narratives of second creation and to narratives of those who rejected it Nye draws on popular literature speeches advertisements paintings and many other media to create a history of American foundation stories He shows how these stories were revised periodically as social and economic conditions changed without ever erasing the earlier stories entirely The image of the isolated frontier family carving a homestead out of the wilderness with an axe persists to this day alongside later images and narratives In the book s conclusion Nye considers the relation between these earlier stories and such later American developments as the conservation movement narratives of environmental recovery and the idealization of wilderness
