Future of Spatial Data and Society National Research Council, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Commission on Geosciences, Environment and Resources, Mapping Science Committee, 1997-05-22 Public and private institutions are committing resources and making important long term decisions concerning the collection management and use of spatial data Although these actions are influenced by current pressures priorities and opportunities their ultimate success depends on how these spatial data activities will be relevant to future needs and demands The Mapping Science Committee in cooperation with the Federal Geographic Data Committee convened a workshop in April 1996 to examine societal and technological changes that might occur within the next 15 years The purpose was to consider within the context of spatial data activities a series of long term visions and to identify societal forces and changes that would make those visions more or less likely The workshop provided a framework for thinking about the future of U S spatial data activities Strategic

Warfare in Cyberspace Gregory J. Rattray, 2001 A comprehensive analysis of strategic information warfare waged via digital means as a distinct concern for the United States and its allies In the information age information systems may serve as both weapons and targets Although the media has paid a good deal of attention to information warfare most treatments so far are overly broad and without analytical foundations In this book Gregory Rattray offers a comprehensive analysis of strategic information warfare waged via digital means as a distinct concern for the United States and its allies Rattray begins by analyzing salient features of information infrastructures and distinguishing strategic information warfare from other types of information based competition such as financial crime and economic espionage He then establishes a conceptual framework for the successful conduct of strategic warfare in general and of strategic information warfare in particular Taking a historical perspective he examines U S efforts to develop air bombardment capabilities in the period between World Wars I and II and compares them to U S efforts in the 1990s to develop the capability to conduct strategic information warfare He concludes with recommendations for strengthening U S strategic information warfare defenses Down to the Wire Allan L. Shampine, 2003 In recent years regulators and businesses have struggled to keep pace with an onslaught of new technologies that has dramatically changed the world's telecommunications networks. This book gathers together research intended for those who must grapple with these changes, the people who must decide whether and how to deploy new telecommunications technologies, and those who must regulate the technologies. The research is divided into three sections focusing on the past, present, and future of telecommunications innovations. The first section, Lessons from the Past, examines what lessons concerning adoption and regulation can be learned by studying the diffusion of recent telecommunications technologies. The second section, Decision Making with Respect to Diffusing Technologies, examines possible improvements to the decision-making processes used by companies and regulators in the face of limited information and dynamic markets. The final section, Public Policy and Future Diffusion, examines public policy implications for future technologies.

Untold Power John Eger, 2022-08-11. Most of us know that the widespread use of robotics, particularly artificial intelligence robots, will most likely have an adverse effect on the workplace and that the new jobs that emerge will require new thinking skills that the current educational system does not provide. It is also becoming clear that communities seeking to attract and nurture those most qualified for the new jobs must also renew themselves if they are to be successful. Most important, the emerging workforce must be able to engage both right and left hemispheres of the brain in order to solve complex problems in increasingly creative ways. This central imperative has resulted in the increasing demand for both artistic and creative skills along with technological and science-based skills. This treatise makes those arguments for reinvention, and while it is not yet known precisely what makes people creative, many ideas about fostering creative people and institutions are discussed. The Covid-19 pandemic has greatly accelerated our use of technology and our responses to changes we must make in education, the workplace, and the workforce that have been lying dormant for too long. At the heart of the changes we must make is the vital realization that art and technology are the new benchmarks of the global economy, an economy where creativity and innovation are shaping a new world order. We are entering a new era, and we must act now to prepare for a very different future.

Academic Capitalism and the New Economy Sheila Slaughter, Gary Rhoades, 2009-06-01. As colleges and universities become more entrepreneurial in a post-industrial economy, they focus on knowledge less as a public good than as a commodity to be capitalized on in profit-oriented activities. In Academic Capitalism and the New Economy, higher education scholars Sheila Slaughter and Gary Rhoades detail the aggressive engagement of U.S. higher education institutions in the knowledge-based economy and analyze the efforts of colleges and universities to develop, market, and sell research products, educational services, and consumer goods in the private marketplace. Slaughter and Rhoades track changes in policy and practice, revealing new social networks and circuits.

of knowledge creation and dissemination as well as new organizational structures and expanded managerial capacity to link higher education institutions and markets They depict an ascendant academic capitalist knowledge learning regime expressed in faculty work departmental activity and administrative behavior Clarifying the regime s internal contradictions they note the public subsidies embedded in new revenue streams and the shift in emphasis from serving student customers to leveraging resources from them Defining the terms of academic capitalism in the new economy this groundbreaking study offers essential insights into the trajectory of American higher education American Economic Policy in the 1990s Jeffrey A. Information Infrastructure Task Force. Working Group on Intellectual Property Rights, 1994 Critical Information Infrastructures Maitland Hyslop, 2007-09-05 Resilience is an increasingly important concept and quality in today s world It is particularly important in the area of Critical Infrastructures It is crucial in the area of Critical Information Infrastructure This is because since the year 2000 man has been dependent on information and telecommunications systems for survival particularly in the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development OECD countries and because all other Critical Inf structures depend upon to a greater or lesser extent Critical Information 1 2 Infrastructure Until probably the late 1980s it would be fair to say that the defense of individual nation states depended upon a mixture of political will and armed might The fall of the Berlin Wall may have effectively ended the Cold War and with it a bipolar world but it brought globalization and a multipolar digital world in its wake Simply put a number of power vacuums were created and these have yet to be fully filled and settled In this New World many changes were afoot These changes include the increasing irrelevance of nation states in federated structures and the export of democracy on the back of globalization One of the biggest changes though is the use of digital technology by the OECD countries This is on such a scale that these countries have become both dependent upon information technology and as individual 3 states largely irrelevant to the new global electronic economy 1 This adaptation of Maslow s hierarchy of needs is attributed to KPMG Developing Holistic Strategic Management In The Advanced Ict Era Mitsuru Kodama, 2019-09-19 From the lens of holistic systems theory this book discusses strategic management adapted to evolving convergence in an era of advanced ICT from the viewpoint of the major management elements of strategy organizations technologies operations and leadership To discuss corporate change in response to such advanced technology in a theoretical and empirical manner it is necessary not only to analyze and consider individual management elements such as strategy organizations technologies operations and leadership in a piecemeal manner but also to determine the research issues from a framework based on a holistic management perspective through systems theory including interaction between and among the respective individual management elements from micro to macro elements Applying both innovation theory and capabilities theory this book presents a new framework and knowledge for holistic strategic management from a systems
