Rural Process Pattern Relationships:

Rural Process-Pattern Relationships David Grossman, 1992-03-19 This volume examines the relationships between rural settlement processes and the spatial patterns they produce by mapping past and present patterns and tracing the historical processes which generated them Using the historical records of Palestine Eretz Israel David Grossman reviews the settlement processes of bedouins sedentarization and nomadization Arab peasants settlement fixation migration and frontier expansion of fallahin and early Jewish settlers Past records are traced back to the biblical period and a survey of the literature dealing with British evidence of rural processes and settlement in medieval times is presented for comparison sharpening Grossman's particular approach to the subject The introduction provides a review of the literature and a discussion of the various approaches to the interpretation of rural spatial processes It evaluates theoretical models and concludes with a simple model functioning as a hypothetical basis for the rest of the book The following two chapters are devoted to the British colonization process which unlike the Palestinian one can be traced in a fairly uninterrupted manner to its Anglo Saxon roots Next are chapters detailing the settlement processes and process patterns in Palestine concluding with a reexamination of theoretical models in light of empirical evidence Rural Process Pattern Relationships considers subjects central to both historical geography and rural geography representing a unique approach of interest to a wide range of scholars

Rural Settlement Structure And African Development Marilyn Silberfein, 2019-09-16 This volume is the result of a group of researchers applying their insights and experience to a common theme All the authors are concerned with rural development in Africa and all have focused on the connection between the development process and the arrangement of people and their built environment in rural space Both anthropologists and geo graphers have contributed to the dialogue on this subject and represen tatives of the two disciplines are included in this volume The members of this group have never all been in the same place at the same time and so have utilized various electronic modes of commu nication to link their locations around the world Two conferences were organized however among a subset of the whole in order to generate a group discussion One of these meetings was a symposium on African rural development held at Temple University while a second was orga nized at the African Studies Association Meetings in Toronto Both opportunities helped raise issues that found their way into individual chapters The audience in each case further stimulated our thinking

Rural Arab Demography and Early Jewish Settlement in Palestine David Grossman,2017-09-08 This volume explores the distribution of the rural population in Palestine from the late Ottoman period 1870 1917 to the British Mandate period 1917 1948 The book focuses on demography specifically migrations population size density growth and the pattern of distribution in rural Palestine before the inception of Jewish settlement 1882 Grossman traces little known Muslim ethnic groups who settled in Palestine s rural areas primarily Egyptians but also Algerians Bosnians and Circassians The author argues that the Arab population in the zones occupied by Jews after 1882 was about one third that of the Arab core areas in the period studied the decline in per capita rural Arab farmland was mainly due to overall population growth not displacement of Arabs economic development suffered largely because of violent disturbances and natural disasters the pattern of growth of Egyptian and other Muslim groups was similar to that of the Jews The main conclusions of this study note that the size of the rural Arab population in the zones occupied by Jews after 1882 was about one tenth of that which occupied the Arab core zones most Egyptian settlement areas coincided with those of the Jewish zones between 1870 and 1945 the decline of Arab farmland was mainly due to Arab population growth rather than Jewish land acquisitions and most migrants Jewish and Muslim settlement zones were leftovers characterized by some form of resource disability

Roman Palmyra Andrew M. Smith II, 2013-01-02 In social economic and cultural terms the eastern frontier of the Roman Empire was vastly complex which has fueled considerable debate among scholars concerning the nature of the interactions between Romans and natives in the Near East Notions of imperialism specifically cultural imperialism frame much of the debate Through a detailed analysis of Palmyrene identity and community formation Andrew M

Smith II presents a social and political history of Roman Palmyra the oasis city situated deep in the Syrian Desert midway between Damascus and the Euphrates river This city state is unique in the ancient world since it began as a humble community probably no more than an isolated village and grew due in part to its role in the caravan trade into an economically powerful cosmopolitan urban center of Graeco Roman character that operated outside of Roman rule yet under Roman patronage The book therefore focuses on two aspects of Palmyrene civilization during the first three centuries of the Common Era the emergence and subsequent development of Palmyra as a commercial and political center in the desert frontier between Rome and Parthia and later Persia and the making of Palmyrenes This study is thus concerned with the creation structure and maintenance of Palmyrene identity and that of Palmyra as an urban community in a volatile frontier zone The history of Palmyra s communal development would be wholly obscure were it not for the archaeological and epigraphic materials that testify to Palmyrene achievements and prosperity at home and abroad These complemented by the literary evidence also provide insight into the relatively obscure historical process of sedentarization and of the relationships between pastoral and sedentary communities in the Roman Near East In addition to examining Palmyra as a frontier community the book will move beyond Syria to explore the development and maintenance of Palmyrene identity in diaspora settings in Italy north Africa and Europe This study is thus concerned with the creation structure and maintenance of Palmyrene identity and that of Palmyra as an urban community in a volatile frontier zone “And in Length of Days

The Religions of Ancient Israel Ziony Zevit, 2003-06-01 This is the most far reaching interdisciplinary investigation into the religion of ancient Israel ever attempted The author draws on textual readings archaeological and historical data and epigraphy to determine what is known about the Israelite religions during the Iron Age 1200-586 BCE The evidence is synthesized within the structure of an Israelite worldview and ethos involving kin tribes land traditional ways and places of worship and a national deity Professor Zevit has originated this interpretive matrix through insights ideas and models developed in the academic study of religion and history within the context of the humanities He is strikingly original for instance in his contention that much of the Psalter was composed in praise of deities other than Yahweh Through his book the author has set a precedent which should encourage dialogue and cooperative study between all ancient historians and archaeologists but particularly between Iron Age archaeologists and biblical scholars The work challenges many conclusions of previous scholarship about the nature of the Israelites religion

From Slumber to Awakening Mishael Caspi, Jerome David Weltsch, 1998 From Slumber to Awakening argues that when investigating the cultural and historical predicament of segments of any society a close examination of the literal expression of the people is necessary to understand their human condition better To accomplish this the individual psyches of authors and poets must be delved into and in this case was accessed through personal interviews This study approaches the unique social position of the Arab Israelis through an exploration of culture and history The examination of the literature itself begins with Israeli literature from the broad perspectives of both the prose and poetry forms and then moving into the literature and literati themselves one by one exploring the lives of the writers while superimposing their human experiences with the expressions and stories of their creative works This examination along with the interviews defines the Arab Israeli minority as a group while also comparing them to Jewish Israeli writers who are close to the Arab Israeli situation
