

RUSH HOUR OF THE GODS

The more wealthy and urban Indians become, the more they turn to a revitalised Hinduism, finds Meera Nanda

The world today is a hotbed of religious revivalism... Experiments with ancient religions have generally failed; religious movements with multiple understandings of religion, with multiple understandings of the world, have only succeeded.

— RICHARD ROBERTSON, The New York Times

THINK CRASHING FOR evidence to back Peter Berger's contention that in our times there takes a turn back at the religious landscape of India, the "revivalist age" of the modern global capitalism.

India today is a country of millions of educated, relatively well-to-do men and women who enthusiastically participate in global networks of science and technology. The Indian economy is leading the fastest in advanced research in biotechnology and the drug industry, where many universities are recognised as the national and international centres of understanding of the natural world.

And yet a vast majority of these middle-class professionals of modern science and technology continue to believe in supernatural powers supposedly embedded in herbs, "god men" or "god women", stars and planets, omens, rituals and sacred spaces. By all India shows, the contemporary religious and spiritual movements are not only growing and spreading but also trying to place them in the lap of a thriving high-tech India.

According to the 2001 census of the first comprehensive by the Centre for the Study of Developing Civilisations among Indians, the level of religiosity has gone up considerably in the past few years. A study by the Pew Center of Religiosity said that the religious belief had declined, while 10 per cent said that they were more religious. The survey put forward that education and the growth of modern science led to a decline in religious belief, not less, religious "faith".

educated Indians are more religious than their rural and illiterate counterparts... religiosity has increased more in small towns and rural than in cities.

Another researcher, India's first religious scholar, the late Professor of Hinduism at the University of Toronto, India, in his book The Hinduism of India, says that in the past few years, the level of religiosity has gone up considerably in the past few years. A study by the Pew Center of Religiosity said that the religious belief had declined, while 10 per cent said that they were more religious. The survey put forward that education and the growth of modern science led to a decline in religious belief, not less, religious "faith".

INDIA'S RENAISSANCE of Indian upper and middle classes are not content with the scientific, rational, down-to-earth, pragmatic approach to modern science and technology. They are looking for a new kind of spirituality that is rooted in the past. They are looking for a new kind of spirituality that is rooted in the past. They are looking for a new kind of spirituality that is rooted in the past. They are looking for a new kind of spirituality that is rooted in the past.

A vast majority of the Indian middle class continue to believe in supernatural powers

Hinduism has for its masses that it is a religion of the masses. They continue to believe in the belief of "Hinduism" as a religion of the masses. They continue to believe in the belief of "Hinduism" as a religion of the masses. They continue to believe in the belief of "Hinduism" as a religion of the masses. They continue to believe in the belief of "Hinduism" as a religion of the masses.

Not only are Hindu gods and goddesses still worshipped in the temples, but they are also worshipped in the homes. They are also worshipped in the homes. They are also worshipped in the homes. They are also worshipped in the homes. They are also worshipped in the homes.

The revivalist movement is not only a revival of the past, but it is also a revival of the future. It is a revival of the future. It is a revival of the future. It is a revival of the future. It is a revival of the future. It is a revival of the future.

Before the coming of the gods, we were in a state of chaos. We were in a state of chaos. We were in a state of chaos. We were in a state of chaos. We were in a state of chaos. We were in a state of chaos.

are also being converted to Hinduism for economic reasons, and are increasingly converting to Hinduism.

HOW TO GROW the phenomenon of Hinduism is not only a revival of the past, but it is also a revival of the future. It is a revival of the future. It is a revival of the future. It is a revival of the future. It is a revival of the future.

The first reason for the revival of Hinduism is the growth of the Indian middle class. The Indian middle class is growing, and it is growing in a way that is not only a revival of the past, but it is also a revival of the future. It is a revival of the future. It is a revival of the future. It is a revival of the future. It is a revival of the future.
