Selfscience The Emotional Intelligence Curriculum:

Self-science Karen Stone-McCown, Joshua M. Freedman, Anabel L. Jensen, Marsha C. Rideout, 1998 Self Science is a curriculum and a process for teaching social and emotional skills. It is a flexible framework where students do activities or experiments that lead to discussion and learning. The students' own experiences, concerns, and questions drive the content so the process works with people from all kinds of backgrounds, all ages, and all levels. Self Science fuses cognitive and affective learning; students build feeling and thinking skills at the same time. Rather than telling children what not to do, Self Science provides multiple options of what to do. It helps children become more aware of themselves and make more conscious decisions about the ways they think, feel, and act independently and interdependently. Nationally and internationally, parents and teachers are increasingly concerned about school culture and emotional intelligence competencies. Issues of exclusion, violence, depression, and underachievement are all addressed within this preventative, comprehensive program. Self Science, so named because emotional intelligence grows from the study of ourselves and our relationships, is one of the few comprehensive, developmental, and research-based curricula for creating a school-wide culture of emotional intelligence. The Self Science program creates a fundamental shift in the structure of the school toward collaboration, inclusion, and humanism. Part of the power of Self Science is its flexibility. Once a facilitator understands how a lesson flows, she or he can easily adapt any current topics, other exercises, and even academic subject matter into the lessons. In addition, Self Science can be taught as a stand-alone class or folded into existing programs such as class meetings, advisory, life skills, or community service.
