Learning Disability Subtyping Stephen R. Hooper, W. Grant Willis, 2013-11-11 The publication of this very important volume comes at a timely juncture in the history of learning disabilities The focus of this volume is on developing a multidisciplinary understanding of the complexities of the research on learning disabilities and its various subtypes It also will serve as an important compendium of the subtyping literature particularly with respect to pertinent issues of nosology specific subtyping models neuro psychological diagnosis and treatment As the authors so correctly suggest the differential diagnosis of learning disabilities subtypes is a critical first step in developing theoretically sound programs of psychoeducational intervention Clearly one must have some idea about the general abilities of a child before realistic expectations can be charted Also how can one plan a program of intervention without some knowledge of the deficient components of achievement within a domain Does it not make both conceptual and practical sense to identify an individual's relative strengths and weaknesses so that abilities or strengths can be utilized to optimize functioning in areas of deficit Although these all sound like reasonable precursors to assisting individuals in need of academic assistance there are those who would argue otherwise Importantly however the Director of the National Institutes of Health in a recent report to Congress advocates exactly what this volume proposes Indeed there are important needs to be addressed and the literature reviewed herein strongly supports the conclusions drawn by these authors

Learning Disabilities and Brain Function William H. Gaddes, Dorothy Edgell, 2013-03-14 The present edition of this book is a revision and expansion of the first two editions which appeared in 1980 and 1985 and in German translation in 1991 More than half of the present volume includes new material and what has been retained from the former editions has been largely rewritten and updated with new research findings A completely new chapter has been added on Attention Deficit Disorder The author of the earlier editions W H G has been joined by a coauthor D E and their combined elementary high school and university teaching and clinical experience totals approximately seventy five years Both of us have directed our professional energies to understanding the puzzle of human learning especially academic learning of those students who despite apparently normal intelligence and opportunity have varying degrees of difficulty in acquiring ideas and skills that are easily mastered by others. Until about fifty years ago there was a common tendency to equate academic success with intelligence and those students who could not meet the demands of the prescribed program were usually required to repeat the same grade with a repetition of the same discouraging treatment that had been unsuccessful the first time.

Learning Disabilities Sandro Misciagna, 2022-03-30 Learning disabilities are a heterogeneous group of disorders characterized by failure to acquire, retrieve and use information competently. These disorders have a multifactorial aetiology and are most common and severe in children, especially when comorbid with other chronic health conditions. This book provides current and comprehensive information about learning disorders, including information on neurobiology, assessment, clinical features and treatment. Chapters cover such topics as historical research and hypotheses of learning disorders, neuropsychological assessment and counselling, characteristics of specific disorders such as autism and ADHD, evidence-based treatment strategies and assistive technologies, and much more.

Learning Disabilities in Older Adolescents and Adults Lynda J. Katz, Gerald Goldstein, Sue R. Beers, 2005-12-11 Learning disabilities is a subject that is usually associated with school-aged children, where the research and intervention strategies are well known. Much less research has been done for assessing and diagnosing older adolescents and adults in this area. This work is an effort to provide a comprehensive review of what we know about certain of these disorders, specifically language-based learning disorders, nonverbal learning disorders, high-functioning autism, attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, and mathematics disorders, and how they manifest themselves in the later years of development and maturity. A chapter addresses each one of these disorders of learning. Included in each chapter is a discussion of historical perspectives, definitions and diagnostic criteria, incidence and prevalence data, comorbidity studies, pertinent research from all relevant fields of study, reasonable accommodations in academia as well as the workplace, and outcome data. This much-needed review will be of interest to clinicians in neuropsychology, educational psychology, and psychopharmacology.
