Narration, Identity, and Historical Consciousness Jürgen Straub, 2006-01-01 A generally acknowledged characteristic of modern life namely the temporalization of experience inextricable from our intensified experience of contingency and difference has until now remained largely outside psychology's purview Wherever questions about the development structure and function of the concept of time have been posed for example by Piaget and other founders of genetic structuralism they have been concerned predominantly with concepts of physical chronometrical time and related concepts e.g. velocity All the contributions to the present volume attempt to close this gap A larger number are especially interested in the narration of stories Overviews of the relevant literature as well as empirical case studies appear alongside theoretical and methodological reflections Most contributions refer to specifically historical phenomena and meaning constructions Some touch on the subjects of biographical memory and biographical constructions of reality Of all the various affinities between the contributions collected here the most important is their consistent attention to issues of the constitution and representation of temporal experience

Psychological Analyses and the Historical Jesus Bas Van Os, 2010-12-23 Since Albert Schweitzer's monumental work nearly a century ago psychology has been banned from Historical Jesus research But both disciplines have advanced and it is time to review the contribution that psychology can make Bas Van Os examines the problems which surround both the historical and the psychological study of Jesus such as the fact that we can only work with the surviving traditions that some of his early followers left us Following this Van Os proposes a theoretical framework that combines sound psychological theories and critical biblical scholarship to explain how Jesus' life and religious experience impacted the beliefs of his friends and family after his death
