Paradise Stanley Barrett, 1994-12-15 What was life like in the 1950s in small communities in Ontario Lower class and upper class residents might have different memories of those days but on one thing they would agree it is a much different world in rural Ontario today The old guard has lost most of its power displaced partly by big brother in the form of bureaucracy and new comers from the city in search of affordable housing even if it means commuting daily to work Unlike their British origin predecessors the newcomers who have begun to appear in the countryside represent a wide range of ethnic and economic backgrounds Paradise concentrates on the transformed class system of one community in rural Ontario In a comparison of the decade following the First World War and the 1980s Stanley R Barrett analyses the changing face and structure of a town as it has had to adapt to modern social and economic realities Particular attention is paid to the phenomenon of the commuter in search of affordable housing and the influx of immigrants of varied ethnic backgrounds and the interaction between these newcomers and long term residents What is striking is just how massive the changes in small town Ontario have been since the Second World War to the extent of almost obliterating long assumed distinctions between rural and urban society indigenous worldviews These theoretical frameworks can then be deployed to create insightful readings of Native American texts Kelsey demonstrates this approach with a fresh look at early Dakota writers including Marie McLaughlin Charles Eastman and Zitkala a and later storytellers such as Elizabeth Cook Lynn Ella Deloria and Philip Red Eagle This book raises the provocative issue of how Native languages and knowledges were historically excluded from the study of Native American literature and how their encoding in early Native American texts destabilized colonial processes Cogently argued and well researched Tribal Theory in Native American Literature sets an agenda for indigenous literary criticism and invites scholars to confront the worlds behind the literatures that they analyze

Brown,2016-10-03 Winner of the 2017 Virginia Marie Folkins Award Association of King County Historical Organizations AKCHO Winner of the 2017 Hal K Rothman Book Prize Western History Association Seattle would not exist without animals Animals have played a vital role in shaping the city from its founding amid existing indigenous towns in the mid nineteenth century to the livestock friendly town of the late nineteenth century to the pet friendly livestock averse modern city When newcomers first arrived in the 1850s they hastened to assemble the familiar cohort of cattle horses pigs chickens and other animals that defined European agriculture This in turn contributed to the dispossession of the Native residents of the area However just as various animals were used to create a Euro American city the elimination of these same animals from Seattle was key to the creation of the new middle class neighborhoods of the twentieth century As dogs and cats came to symbolize home and family Seattleites relationship with livestock became distant and exploitative demonstrating the deep social contradictions that characterize the modern American metropolis Throughout Seattle s history people have sorted animals into categories and into places as a way of asserting power over animals other people and property In The City Is More Than Human Frederick Brown explores the dynamic troubled relationship humans have with animals In so doing he challenges us to acknowledge the role of animals of all sorts in the making and remaking of cities

French and Indians in the Heart of North America, 1630-1815 Robert Englebert,Guillaume Teasdale,2013-04-01 In the past thirty years the study of French Indian relations in the center of North America has emerged as an important field for examining the complex relationships that defined a vast geographical area including the Great Lakes region the Illinois Country the Missouri River Valley and Upper and Lower Louisiana For years no one better represented this emerging area of study than Jacqueline Peterson and Richard White scholars who identified a world defined by miscegenation between French colonists and the native population or m tissage and the unique process of cultural accommodation that led to a middle ground between French and Algonquians Building on the research of Peterson White and Jay Gitlin this collection of essays brings together new and established scholars from the United States Canada and France to move beyond the paradigms of the middle ground and m tissage At the same time it seeks to demonstrate the rich variety of encounters that defined French and Indians in the heart of North America from 1630 to 1815 Capturing the complexity and nuance of these relations the authors examine a number of thematic areas that provide a broader assessment of the historical bridge building process including ritual interactions transatlantic connections diplomatic relations and post New France French Indian relations
