Feerick, 2010-10-02 Strangers in Blood explores in a range of early modern literature the association between migration to foreign lands and the moral and physical degeneration of individuals Arguing that in early modern discourse the concept of race was primarily linked with notions of bloodline lineage and genealogy rather than with skin colour and ethnicity Jean E Feerick establishes that the characterization of settler communities as subject to degenerative decline constituted a massive challenge to the fixed system of blood that had hitherto underpinned the English social hierarchy Considering contexts as diverse as Ireland Virginia and the West Indies Strangers in Blood tracks the widespread cultural concern that moving out of England would adversely affect the temper and complexion of the displaced individual changes that could be fought only through willed acts of self discipline In emphasizing the decline of blood as found at the centre of colonial narratives Feerick illustrates the unwitting disassembling of one racial system and the creation of another Dictionnaire Oeconomique: Or, The Family Dictionary ... The Family, Marriage, and Radicalism in British Women's Novels of the 1790s Jennifer Golightly, 2012-02-01 This book explores the ways in which five female radical novelists of the 1790s Elizabeth Inchbald Eliza Fenwick Mary Hays Charlotte Smith and Mary Wollstonecraft attempted to use the components of private life to work toward widespread social reform These writers depict the conjugal family as the site for a potential reformation of the prejudices and flaws of the biological family The biological family in the radical novels of female writers is fraught with problems greed and selfishness pervert the relationships between siblings and neglect and ignorance characterize the parenting received by the heroines Additionally the radical novelists responding to representations of biological families as inherently restrictive for unmarried women develop the notion of marriage to a certain type of man as a social duty Marriage between two properly sensible people who have both cultivated their reason and understanding and who can live together as equals sharing domestic responsibilities is shown to be an ideal with the power to create social change Positioning their depictions of marriage in opposition to earlier feminist depictions of female utopian societies the female radical novelists of the 1790s strive to depict relationships between men and women that are characterized by cooperation individual autonomy and equality What is most important about these depictions is their ultimate failure Most of the female radical novelists find such marriages nearly impossible to conceptualize Marriage for many of the female radical novelists was an institution they perceived as inextricably related to male concerns about property and inescapably patriarchal under the marriage laws of late eighteenth century British society Unions between two worthy individuals outside the boundaries of marriage are shown in the female radical novels to be equally problematic sex inevitably is the basis for such unions yet sex leaves women vulnerable to exploitation by men Rather than the triumph therefore of what comes to be in these novels the male associated values of property and power through marriage the female radical novels end by suggesting an alternative community one that will shelter those members of society who are most frequently exploited in male attempts to accumulate this property and power women servants and children
