Other topics covered include professional competitiveness, Melville's search for a father figure, masculine ambivalence in the marketplace and political literary aspects of nationalism, transcendentalism, race and other defining issues of Hawthorne and Melville's times. Roughly half of the essays focus on biographical issues; the others take literary perspectives. The essays are informed by a variety of critical approaches as well as by new historical insights and new understandings of the possibilities that existed for male friendships in nineteenth-century American culture.

Toward a Female Genealogy of Transcendentalism

Jana L. Argersinger, Phyllis Cole, 2014. The first large-scale collaborative study of women's voices and their vital role in the American transcendentalist movement. Many of its seventeen distinguished scholars work from newly recovered archives and all offer fresh readings of understudied topics and texts, shedding light on female contributions.

Nathaniel Hawthorne and the Romance of the Orient Luther S. Luedtke, 1989-09-22. This volume argues that by focusing on British and American backgrounds, readers have underestimated the impact of Asia and the East on American novelist and short story writer Nathaniel Hawthorne's 1804-1864 writing. The central force in Hawthorne's intellectual development was New England Puritanism. It fascinated even when it sometimes repelled him. It exercised a pull on his imagination which a lifetime of varied experience did not loosen. The author recreates Hawthorne's heritage and examines his readings in material dealing with the East; he examines three of Hawthorne's early tales that were all written before 1830 and he looks at Hawthorne's The Story Teller, the two-volume book of sketches and tales Hawthorne unsuccessfully tried to publish in 1834 and issued piecemeal thereafter in periodicals as annuals. The author also evaluates the role of the Eastern world in Hawthorne's view of Romance and studies some of Hawthorne's remarkable heroines: Beatrice Rapaccini, Hester, Zenobia and Miriam. In particular, the author maintains that the Puritan element in Hawthorne's ancestry has been overstressed and that insufficient attention has been paid to the equally important travel/adventure/exploration aspect of Hawthorne's heritage and craft.

American Literature and the Culture of Reprinting, 1834-1853 Meredith L. McGill, 2013-10-11. The antebellum period has long been identified with the belated emergence of a truly national literature. And yet, as Meredith L. McGill argues, a mass market for books in this period was built and sustained through what we would call rampant literary piracy: a national literature developed not despite but because of the systematic copying of foreign works. Restoring a political dimension to accounts of the economic grounds of antebellum literature, McGill unfolds the legal arguments and political struggles that produced an American culture of reprinting and held it in place for two crucial decades. In this culture of reprinting, the circulation of print outstripped authorial and editorial control. McGill examines the workings of literary culture within this market, shifting her gaze from first and authorized editions to reprints and piracies, from the form of the book to the intersection of book and periodical publishing and from a national literature to an internally divided and transatlantic literary marketplace. Through readings of the work of Dickens, Poe and Hawthorne, McGill seeks both to analyze how changes in the conditions of publication influenced literary form and to measure what was lost as literary markets became centralized and literary culture became stratified in the early 1850s American Literature and the Culture of Reprinting 1834-1853 delineates a distinctive literary culture that was regional in articulation and transnational in scope while questioning the grounds of the startlingly recent but nonetheless powerful equation of the national interest with the extension of authors' rights      Hawthorne's
