Peterson, D.J. Stephenson, 1991-03-05 Water resources exploitation has been regarded as a way of initiating economic development in many countries Planning concepts are now changing Thorough environmental studies sociological and economic studies now precede project formulation Justification solely on the basis of benefit cost studies is no longer sufficient for many development agencies The broader approach is introduced in this book but the real emphasis is on the situation in and needs of developing countries Some of the problems experienced in building water resources in developing countries are described in this book and methods of solution based on the limited experience of the authors are offered These range from use of unbiased common sense coupled with a close understanding of people's requirements to a comprehensive computer simulated planning model Some types of water resources development are described in more detail These include irrigation hydro electric power and rural water supply Sections on socio economics and human resource development are also included as well as on data collection and project planning Lessons from the failure of multimillion dollar projects are not hard to come by and examples and pointers which will assist future planners are given Attention is paid to the need for aid to include training and to stimulate local economies However big water projects appear they cannot escape the effects of the rest of the country's economy Attention is also drawn to environmental problems particularly soil erosion often caused by water resources development The fact that water resources development cannot be carried out by engineers only is recognized The input of many professions and vast experience is needed Drawn on international case studies much of the material has been presented in postgraduate courses by the authors Botswana National Water Master Plan Study: Water resources modelling, 1991 Rural Planning in Developing Countries David Dent, Olivier Dubois, Barry Dalal-Clayton, 2013-06-17 This book provides an international perspective on rural planning focused on developing countries It examines conventional development planning and innovative local planning approaches drawing together lessons from recent experience of rural planning and land use The authors examine past and current practice and ways that land use planning and management of natural resources can underpin sustainable local livelihoods They draw on case studies from Africa Asia and Latin America to present findings relevant throughout the developing world

Policies, Performance and Prospects Chennat Gopalakrishnan, Cecilia Tortajada, Asit K. Biswas, 2005-08-04 It is being increasingly realised that water is likely to be one of the most critical resource issues for the first half of the twenty first century Accelerating demand for water for various uses and user groups and ineffective measures to address the quality decline from point and non point sources of pollution have made water management more complex and difficult than ever before in human history All the current trends indicate that water management will become even more complex in the future because of society's higher demands for good quality water and new and emerging impacts on the water sector due to the forces of globalisation These include the liberalisation of trade in agricultural and manufactured products information and communication revolution and technological developments in areas traditionally not considered to be water oriented like biotechnology Impacts of these new and emerging forces on the water sector are still not fully understood or appreciated at present but they are likely to change water use practices dramatically in many countries of the world during the coming decades

Development and Harmonization of Environmental Laws, Botswana National Water Master Plan Study: Rural water supply, 1991 The Governance of Climate Change Adaptation in Developing Countries: The Case of National Disaster Management in Bangladesh and Pakistan in Comparative Perspective Tina Peissker, 2013-06-01 The prospect of the adverse effects that global climate change will have on human societies opened up a discourse about the way adaptation should be managed In order to finance adaptation measures in the most severe affected countries the parties of the Kyoto Protocol established the Adaptation Fund in 2007 In view of the limited resources that are available for adaptation scales for the prioritization of countries that are based on their suspected vulnerability have been developed in literature But so far indicators of vulnerability reflect only the general indicators of human development and therefore fail to capture the complex structures of vulnerability In order to capture the mentioned complexity in a more satisfactory way this book highlights the theory of collective learning The collective learning approach assumes that vulnerability can be significantly decreased when governance systems adapt to external changes through collective learning processes This study connects to this notion and therefore it assesses the influence of collective learning processes on the vulnerability of the Bangladeshi and Pakistani society towards flood hazards This determinant of vulnerability is used to capture the matter's complexity Kenya National Assembly Official Record \(Hansard\) ,1997-09-24 The official records of the proceedings of the Legislative Council of the Colony and Protectorate of Kenya the House of Representatives of the Government of Kenya and the National Assembly of the Republic of Kenya Global Development and Environment Joe Williams,James Duminy,2025-05-19 Available open access digitally under CC BY licence Development and environmental challenges are often framed at the global or planetary scale but in a vague or apolitical manner This book develops a theoretically rigorous and politicized concept of the planetary to intervene in contemporary debates on global development and to enhance our critical understanding of development as we approach the second quarter of the twenty first century Chapters explore key themes and processes including urbanization demographic change health financialization and infrastructure development Referencing diverse cases and examples drawn from across the world the book argues that the futures of global development are inseparable from environmental challenges and transformations Irrigation Water Pricing François Molle,Jeremy Berkoff,2007 This book contains 14 separately authored chapters on the pricing of irrigation water The chapters are entitled 1 Water pricing in irrigation the lifetime of an idea 2 Water pricing in irrigation mapping the debate in the light of experience 3 Why is agricultural water demand unresponsive at low price ranges 4 Get the prices right a model of water prices and irrigation efficiency in Maharashtra India 5 Thailand's free water rationale for a water charge and policy shifts 6 Water rights and water fees in rural Tanzania 7 Who will pay for water The Vietnamese State's dilemma of decentralization of water management in the Red River Delta 8 Water pricing in Haryana India 9 The energy irrigation nexus in South Asia groundwater conservation and power sector viability 10 Wells and canals in Jordan can pricing policies regulate irrigation water use 11 Water pricing in Tadla Morocco 12 Water pricing policies and recent reforms in China the conflict between conservation and other policy goals 13 Water pricing and irrigation a review of the European experience and 14 Policy driven determinants of irrigation development and environmental sustainability a case study in Spain African Handbook of Climate Change Adaptation Nicholas Oguge,Desalegn Ayale, Lydia Adeleke,Izael da Silva,2021-05-20 This open access book discusses current thinking and presents the main issues and challenges associated with climate change in Africa It introduces evidences from studies and projects which show how climate change adaptation is being and may continue to be successfully implemented in African countries. Thanks to its scope and wide range of themes surrounding climate change, the ambition is that this book will be a lead publication on the topic which may be regularly updated and hence capture further works. Climate change is a major global challenge. However, some geographical regions are more severely affected than others. One of these regions is the African continent. Due to a combination of unfavourable socio-economic and meteorological conditions, African countries are particularly vulnerable to climate change and its impacts. The recently released IPCC special report 'Global Warming of 1.5°C' outlines the fact that keeping global warming by the level of 1.5°C is possible but also suggested that an increase by 2.0°C could lead to crises with crops agriculture fed by rain could drop by 50% in some African countries by 2020 and livestock production could damage water supplies and pose an additional threat to coastal areas. The 5th Assessment Report produced by IPCC predicts that wheat may disappear from Africa by 2080 and that maize a staple will fall significantly in southern Africa. Also arid and semi-arid lands are likely to increase by up to 8% with severe ramifications for livelihoods, poverty eradication and meeting the SDGs. Pursuing appropriate adaptation strategies is thus vital in order to address the current and future challenges posed by a changing climate. It is against this background that the African Handbook of Climate Change Adaptation is being published. It contains papers prepared by scholars, representatives from social movements, practitioners and members of governmental agencies undertaking research and/or executing climate change projects in Africa and working with communities across the African continent. Encompassing over 100 contributions from across Africa, it is the most comprehensive publication on climate change adaptation in Africa ever produced.

Water Resources of North America Asit K. Biswas, 2013-12-17. Leonardo da Vinci, the eminent Renaissance scholar and philosopher, said water is the driver of nature. Many may have considered it to be an overstatement in the past but at the beginning of the third millennium, no sane individual would disagree with Leonardo's view. Water is becoming an increasingly scarce resource for most of the world's citizens. The current trends indicate that the overall situation is likely to deteriorate further at least for the next two decades unless the water profession eschews its existing business as usual practices which can only allow incremental changes to occur. Somewhat surprisingly, the water profession as a whole neither realised nor appreciated the gravity of the global water situation as late as 1990, even though a few serious scholars have been pointing out the increasing criticality of the situation from around 1982. For example, the seriousness of the crisis was not a major issue either at the International Conference on Water and the Environment which was organised by the UN system in Dublin and also at the UN Conference on Environment and Development at Rio de Janeiro held in 1992, both are considered to be important events for the water sector of the past decade. It is now being increasingly recognised that the Dublin Conference was poorly planned and organised and thus not surprisingly it produced very little if any worthwhile and lasting results.
