Bedouin, Settlers, and Holiday-Makers Donald P. Cole, Soraya Altorki, 1998-09-01 The arid regions impose strict limits upon human existence and activity And yet by respecting those limits the flourishing and stable culture of these regions has for centuries been sustained In the late twentieth century however forces such as modernization globalization and the politics and economics of nations became so great that major changes in the old ways had to take place for the sake of survival Egypt's northwest coast where meager coastal rains have supported a sparse but thriving population of Bedouin saw the arrival of settlers from the Nile Valley accustomed to a very different way of life and production and hordes of tourists whose empty silent structures effectively turned the most productive strip of the coastal range into an artificial desert This study documents the great accommodations that took place to ensure the arid rangelands of the northwest coast continue to be viable for the demands of human existence imposed on them A main thesis of this study the authors write is that change in the northwest coast of Egypt has strong parallels in other arid regions of the wider Arab world and specific comparisons are made to change underway elsewhere especially regarding the transformation of Arab nomadic pastoralist production to a new form of ranching and the related changes of sedentarization and the monetization of most aspects of livelihood
