power and delivering it to the customer the first part of the book outlines the issue of setting utility rates and considers some of the proposals to provide regulated industries with incentives to respond to economic and environmental concerns The problems of energy supply occupy the second part of the book which includes a survey of the costs of alternative energy sources and estimates of their environmental impacts as well as a case study of the construction of the Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant The book concludes by documenting the results of subsidy programs that were designed to target the development of wind power and residential energy conservation Regulators we learn have a mixed record when it comes to managing the production of energy Some conservation programs have enjoyed considerable economic success particularly those that correct a lack of consumer information Others such as the renewable energy tax credits or programs designed to subsidize new technologies have cost much more than the value of the energy they have saved What emerges clearly from this study is that regulated industries are not immune from the forces of competition This title is part of UC Press s Voices Revived program which commemorates University of California Press s mission to seek out and cultivate the brightest minds and give them voice reach and impact Drawing on a backlist dating to 1893 Voices Revived makes high quality peer reviewed scholarship accessible once again using print on demand technology This title was originally published in 1991 Industry Studies Larry L.
