Transforming Power Aynsley Kellow, 1996 Originally published in 1996 this book is an exploration and analysis of the electricity industry in the context of uncertainty following the energy crisis of the 1970s and concern over the greenhouse effect Few industries demand a similar level of foresight and planning or such vast amounts of capital The book examines five well known Australian Canadian and New Zealand cases and closely analyses the ways in which various agencies have sought ends to serve the means at their disposal Electricity has long been regarded as a natural monopoly but questions of privatisation regulation and government control are increasingly prevalent The book explores these issues and also notes the experiences of other countries in its analysis of institutional reform Aynsley Kellow argues for different approaches to electricity planning which offer much by way of economic savings and minimisation of environmental problems

Sustainable Energy and the States Dianne Rahm, 2014-11-18 With America's dependence on fossil fuels painfully apparent due to world events and the resultant sharply rising gas prices the search for renewable energy sources has never been more important Still the quest for sustainable energy is far from new Since passage of the National Energy Act of 1978 states and the federal government have encouraged technological advances designed to make the United States self sufficient when it comes to energy production Government incentives and global minded policymakers encourage development of alternative energy sources While addressing the national issues of global climate change and energy security the idea of sustainable energy must also find a way to appeal to an increasingly competitive market Through nine case studies this volume explores the roles which politics market forces and leadership play as barriers or facilitators in the development of sustainable energy sources Beginning with an overview of energy related programs and legislation including the National Energy Act of 1978 and the Energy Policy acts of 1992 and 2005 the book discusses the various financial programs and policy mechanisms used by the states Each of the nine essays examines sustainable energy development within a particular state or region The importance of the political climate the impact of free markets and the value of effective leadership with regard to this particular technological development remains a common thread Topics such as the perceived effectiveness of state and federal governmental efforts and prevalent attitudes regarding renewable energy are also discussed Each essay includes an in depth bibliography with many website resources to encourage further research Statistical tables are also provided Instructors considering this book for use in a course may request an examination copy here Directory of Consultants ,1991 Energy Joseph Russell Rudolph,1995 A road map for the novice researcher contemplating the broad field affected by and concerned with energy Advanced Technologies for Electric Demand-side Management ,1991 The Journal of Energy and Development ,1990 Advanced Technologies for Electric Demand-side Management: Workshops on DSM technology impacts ,1991 Sage Public Administration Abstracts ,1990 National Journal ,1989-04 Regulatory Incentives for Demand-side Management Steven Nadel,Michael W. Reid,David R. Wolcott,1992 The current regulatory system often serves to financially reward utilities that sell more electricity and penalise those that sell less thus discouraging energy efficiency To address the problem a variety of reforms have been proposed and implemented to make the least cost plan for meeting future electricity needs the most profit plan for the utility This book brings together contributions by over 20 experts who are currently shaping regulatory incentives across the US These experts analyze leading incentive mechanisms rationales for regulatory incentives how incentives evolved linkages to programme evaluation impacts of incentives on utilities and the future direction of incentives Global Energy Transitions, with Emphasis on the Last Five Years of the Century ,1996 Journal of Policy Analysis and Management ,1990 Encompasses issues and practices in policy analysis and public management Listed among the contributors are economists public managers and operations researchers Featured regularly are book reviews and a department devoted to discussing ideas and issues of importance to practitioners researchers and academics A Stakeholder Approach to Corporate Governance Abbass F. Alkhafaji,1989-09-26 Alkhafaji presents the fundamental concepts of corporate governance and suggests a new approach to the subject that focuses on the stakeholder As Alkhafaji demonstrates corporate governance has moved far from traditional concerns with purely business issues like growth and profitability and now includes public issues such as pollution equal employment opportunities insider trading and criminal conduct Using data from his own empirical studies Alkhafaji argues that the conventional board model no longer functions as originally intended He analyzes potential management reaction to alternative forms of governance bodies and concludes that the data suggest a stakeholder board would be best suited to current American conditions Organized into five parts each of which builds upon concepts discussed in the preceding chapters the volume begins by discussing the concept of the company and the changing environment in which it operates In the second section Alkhafaji addresses corporate governance in specific terms and includes survey data showing management's reaction to traditional and nontraditional forms of corporate governance Part three looks at corporate governance in the context of social responsibility ethics and business government relations while the following chapters discuss the ongoing restructuring of American business and its relation to corporate governance The final section examines the role played by corporate governance in strategic management Numerous tables figures and models support points made in the text
