General Assembly Science, Technology and Innovation Policies for Inclusive Growth in Africa Reuben A. Alabi, Achim Gutowski, Nazar Mohamed Hassan, Tobias Knedlik, Samia Satti Osman Mohamed Nour, Karl Wohlmuth, 2018 The volume analyses how to make Science Technology and Innovation STI Policies relevant for inclusive growth strategies in Africa The base for a transformative STI policy is to link the STI policies to Africa's economic transformation policies In a first part the general issues of introducing effective STI policies are presented In a second part country case studies highlight the new approach Cases such as Sudan and Nigeria are analysed as these two countries have a long history of STI development because of different history size and structure they need to move in different directions towards a coherent STI policy for inclusive growth NASA authorization for fiscal year 1977 United States. Congress. Senate. Committee on Aeronautical and Space Sciences, 1976 Tariff and Science Policies D.J. Daly, S. Globerman, 1976-12-15 This controversial analysis of economic nationalism will interest economists and those concerned with nationalism and the competitive position of Canadian manufacturing It is the first attempt to test empirically an economic model of nationalism a model which implies that an emphasis on nationalism ultimately reduces economic efficiency with low income groups bearing most of the resultant cost and redistributes income from lower to upper income individuals Applying the model to federal commercial and science policies the authors argue that these policies have contributed to the high costs and low productivity of Canadian manufacturing and retarded the adoption of new processes and improved techniques They find that the costs of these are borne by the urban workers and the consumer while the major beneficiaries are Canadian managers scientists and engineers The efficiency and competitive position of Canadian industry are reduced and income redistributed from lower to upper income groups Science policies designed to increase at high cost a broad range of Canadian research and development capabilities are related to the slower adoption of new manufacturing processes in Canada than in the United States and Europe The authors conclude that greater trade liberalization and increased industrial specialization would benefit Canada and Ontario that more emphasis should be placed on rapid diffusion of innovation and that research should be concentrated in fields where Canada has a potential competitive advantage Science and Technology Policy - Volume I Rigas Arvanitis, 2009-07-20 Science and Technology Policy theme is a component of Encyclopedia of Technology Information and Systems Management Resources in the global Encyclopedia of Life Support Systems EOLSS which is an integrated compendium of twenty one Encyclopedias Science and technology policy covers all the public sector measures designed for the creation funding support and mobilization of scientific and technological resources The content of the Theme on Science and technology policy provides the essential aspects and a myriad of issues of great relevance to our world such as Science and Technology Policy International Dimensions of Science and Technology Policy The Innovation System The Policy Making Process in Science and Technology Regional Perspectives A New Scenario for Science and Technology Policies in the Developed and Developing World These two volumes are aimed at the following five major target audiences University and

College students Educators Professional practitioners Research personnel and Policy analysts managers and decision makers and NGOs Oversight Review of European Science and Technology Activities and Policies ,1988 Problems of Communism ,1981 Global Science: The Last Option Before Collapse Abdelhak Lamiri,2024-04-26

This book presents the culmination of a 14 year pathbreaking research project examining the risks of civilisation collapse and potential solutions to avoid such an outcome A profound diagnosis reveals that the root issue lies in the widening rift between the hard and social sciences which have proven largely ineffective at managing the deficiencies of the former Of course the prevailing strategies structures and human resource management processes of modern nations have also played a significant role in destabilising societies In economics we still operate on principles of partial and general equilibrium whereas we urgently need to adopt the global equilibrium framework proposed here As things stand currently we face two major failings in confronting this crisis First we lack the knowledge to overcome the existential threats before us Second the forces calling for change have adopted inadequate strategies organisations and leadership compared to the well oiled machinery of the status quo What we need is to jointly develop the missing knowledge and use it to take appropriate action beginning with the creation of a new discipline Global Science to make sense of it all

The Social Context Of Soviet Science Linda L Lubrano,Susan Gross Solomon,2019-06-13 From its very beginnings Western scholarly writing on Soviet science has been largely contextual in orientation with particular attention given to the institutional and political setting of science in Russian and Soviet history This book moves that tradition in a new direction by focusing more closely on the social conditions of the research process

Science Indicators ,1978 Denationalizing Science E. Crawford,T. Shinn,Sverker Sörlin,2013-06-29 Present trends indicate that in the years to come transnational science whether basic or applied and involving persons equipment or funding will grow considerably The main purpose of this volume is to try to understand the reasons for this denationalization of science its historical contexts and its social forms The Introduction to the volume sets out the socio political intellectual and economic contexts for the nationalization and denationalization of the sciences processes that have extended over four centuries The articles examine the specific conditions that have given rise to the growth of transnational science in the 20th century Among these are the need for cognitive and technical standardization of scientific knowledge products pressure toward cost sharing of large installations such as CERN the voluntary and involuntary migration of scientists and the global market for R D products that has emerged at the end of the century The volume raises many new questions for research by historians and sociologists of science and poses problems that are of concern both to scientists and science policy makers

The Origins of the Developmental State in Taiwan J. Megan Greene,2008-04-30 The rapid growth of Taiwan s postwar miracle economy is most frequently credited to the leading role of the state in promoting economic development Megan Greene challenges this standard interpretation in the first in depth examination of the origins of Taiwan s developmental state Greene examines the ways in which the Guomindang state planned and promoted scientific and technical development both in mainland China between 1927 and 1949 and on Taiwan after 1949 Using industrial science policy as a lens she shows that the state even during its most authoritarian periods did not function as a monolithic entity State planners were concerned with maximizing the use of Taiwan's limited resources for industrial development Political leaders on the other hand were most concerned with the state's political survival The developmental state emerged gradually as a result of the combined efforts of technocrats and outsiders including academicians and foreign advisors Only when the political leadership put its authority and weight behind the vision of these early planners did Taiwan's developmental state fully come into being In Taiwan's combination of technocratic expertise and political authoritarianism lie implications for our understanding of changes taking place in mainland China today
