Penson, 2007-11-06 With his keen analytical mind and penchant for organization Charles Darwin would have made an excellent clinical investigator Unfortunately for surgery his early exposure at Edinburgh to the brutality of operations in 1825 convinced him to reject his father's plan for his career and pursue his interest in nature His subsequent observations of how environmental pressures shaped the development of new species provided the essential mechanism to explain evolution and the disappearance of those species that failed to adapt Today surgeons face the same reality as new technology progressive regulation by government and payers medico legal risks and public demands for proof of performance force changes in behavior that our predecessors never imagined We know that surgeons have always prided themselves on accurate documentation of their results including their complications and deaths but observational studies involving a single surgeon or institution have given way to demands for controlled interventional trials despite the inherent difficulty of studying surgical patients by randomized blinded techniques That is why this book is so timely and important In a logical and comprehensive approach the authors have assembled a group of experienced clinical scientists who can demonstrate the rich variety of techniques in epidemiology and statistics for reviewing existing publications structuring a clinical study and analyzing the resulting data

The Present and Future of Immunology Education Andrea Bottaro, Deborah M. Brown, John Gregory Frelinger, 2022-01-24 The explosion of basic and applied immunology in the first decades of the 21st century has brought forth new opportunities and challenges for immunology education at all academic levels from professional to undergraduate medical graduate and post graduate instruction Moreover developing methods and techniques for educating general audiences on the importance and benefits of immunology will be critical for increasing public awareness and support One major immediate challenge consists in accommodating within the confines of traditional immunology curricula a body of knowledge that continues to grow exponentially in both size and complexity Furthermore the practical toolbox of immunological research has vastly expanded and even in the present environment of highly interdisciplinary and collaborative science future immunologists will likely need to be at least conversant in for instance computational structural and system biology nanotechnology and tissue engineering At the same time our perspective of the immune system has progressively developed from primarily a host defense mechanism to a fundamental homeostatic system with organism wide physiological and clinical significance and with potentially transformative biotechnological and therapeutic applications As a consequence in addition to stand alone courses immunology is increasingly integrated into other courses or distributed longitudinally throughout a multi year curriculum This necessitates inter disciplinary approaches to reach an expanding range of disciplines as diverse as neurobiology cancer biology oncology infectious diseases pharmacology orthopedics and bioengineering Creative approaches and pedagogical flexibility will be needed to avoid the pitfall of one size fits all instruction and to tailor level and discipline appropriate content to different types of students using multiple teaching formats Finally like most other disciplines immunology education is also under strong pressure to introduce new didactic strategies that are relevant and meaningful to a generation of students who are digital natives comfortable with and expect on demand and multi modal learning diversified sources and active engagement Thankfully the dynamic and interactive behavior of immune system cells now visualized with striking immediacy by in vivo imaging has the ability to capture and hold the interest of even the most jaded learner The need for an increasingly immunology knowledgeable workforce not just academic and industry scientists but also clinical and research lab technicians biomedical engineers and physicians in a growing array of specialties will also expand job opportunities for immunologists as educators and for content creators dedicated to generating new didactic tools in this field

Laura Sessums, Lyle Dennis, Mark Liebow, William Moran, Eugene Rich, 2011-08-17 Interest in policy influences on health care is high and will remain high as long as health care costs continue to rise and health care reform remains a hot topic in the news There are inevitable and frequent points of interface between health care public policy and the health professions in their daily work clinicians see the problems with the health care system but often feel powerless and unsure how to advocate for system changes Clinicians and Health Care Advocacy is written by clinicians for clinicians and focuses on how policy works and what individual professionals can do to affect policy It looks at the facts and processes in an accessible way that employs case based examples of clinician advocacy to illustrate its points The book is nonpartisan and will stay neutral on preferences for one public policy solution versus another single payer vs market reform for example Instead it encourages a model of clinicians as responsible for healing not only the individual patient but also the larger health care system in which they work      Transactions of the Section on Surgery, General and Abdominal of the American Medical Association
