

A dynamic illustration of a Western movie scene. In the foreground, a man in a brown coat and black hat (Steve Brodie) is riding a brown horse, holding a woman in a red dress (Rita Gam) in his arms. To his left, another man in a green shirt and yellow hat (Rick Jason) is riding a dark horse, holding a pistol. In the background, a group of men on horseback are chasing a lone figure across a vast, hazy landscape under a cloudy sky.

Sierra Baron:

Sierra Baron Thomas Wakefield Blackburn, 1973 Sierra Baron Tom W. Blackburn, 1997 Mike McGann was born tough and grew up tough in the Irish slums of the Boston waterfront When he jumped ship at Monterey the Spanish capital of California he had only poker winnings a brass nerve and an appetite for gold and power It wasn't long before he ran head on into the proud Spanish aristocrats who held the land in feudal domain But before he was through Mike McGann would carve himself a reputation as the Sierra Baron The Drive-In Guy Barefoot, 2023-11-16 The Drive In meaningfully contributes to the complex picture of outdoor cinema that has been central to American culture and to a history of US cinema based on diverse viewing experiences rather than a select number of films Drive in cinemas flourished in 1950s America in some summer weeks to the extent that there were more cinemagoers outdoors than indoors Often associated with teenagers interested in the drive in as a passion pit or a venue for exploitation films accounts of the 1950s American drive in tend to emphasise their popularity with families with young children downplaying the importance of a film programme apparently limited to old low budget or independent films and characterising drive in operators as industry outsiders They retain a hold on the popular imagination The Drive In identifies the mix of generations in the drive in audience as well as accounts that articulate individual experiences from the drive in as a dating venue to a segregated space Through detailed analysis of the film industry trade press local newspapers and a range of other primary sources including archival records on cinemas and cinema circuits in Arkansas California New York State and Texas this book examines how drive ins were integrated into local communities and the film industry and reveals the importance and range of drive in programmes that were often close to that of their indoor neighbours Community Environmental Psychology and Community Resilience José Sandoval-Díaz, Rodolfo E. Mardones Barrera, 2025-10-25 This book presents a particular kind of environmental psychology that has emerged in Latin America community environmental psychology Different from mainstream environmental psychology developed in the Global North which usually focuses on individual differences often disconnected from historical social and political contexts community environmental psychology is a situated approach aimed at social change and in articulation with community psychology developed to study interactions between people and communities in relation to the natural and or built space This contributed volume is organized into two complementary parts Chapters in the first part articulate conceptual frameworks that nourish community environmental psychology and methodological approaches that help to understand analyze and transform dynamics between communities and their environments from a situated critical perspective committed to socio environmental justice Chapters of the second part present studies of community resilience in environmental psychology based on case studies carried out in six Latin American countries These works reveal the applicability of diverse conceptual and methodological frameworks for an empirical approach to community resilience in specific psycho environmental contexts Situated in territories marked by socio natural disasters unequal urbanization extractive economies and environmental conflicts the studies show how communities develop and deploy response resistance and territorial transformation capacities when faced with contexts marked by social injustice and persistent exclusion Community Environmental Psychology and Community Resilience aims to position community environmental psychology as a field of scientific and applied development committed to social transformation Based on the theoretical and methodological approaches presented in the first part and the empirical studies included in the second the book proposes an approach that situates community as the central axis of the analysis and allows expanding the traditional frameworks of environmental psychology by integrating structural vulnerability collective agency and power understood as procedural and contextual dynamics that configure our communal lives as constitutive dimensions of the person environment relationship "A" Western Filmmakers Henryk
