War's Ends James G. Murphy, 2014-01-27 Before military action and even before mobilization the decision on whether to go to war is debated by politicians pundits and the public As they address the right or wrong of such action it is also a time when in the language of the just war tradition the wise would deeply investigate their true claim to jus ad bellum the right of war Wars have negative consequences not the least impinging on human life and offer infrequent and uncertain benefits yet war is part of the human condition James G Murphy's insightful analysis of the jus ad bellum criteria competent authority just cause right intention probability of success last resort and proportionality is grounded in a variety of contemporary examples from World War I through Vietnam the soccer war between Honduras and El Salvador Afghanistan and the Middle East conflict Murphy argues persuasively that understanding jus ad bellum requires a primary focus on the international common good and the good of peace Only secondarily should the argument about going to war hinge on the right of self defense in fact pursuing the common good requires political action given that peace is not simply the absence of violence He moves on to demonstrate the interconnectedness of the jus ad bellum criteria contending that some criteria depend logically on others and that competent authority not just cause is ultimately the most significant criterion in an analysis of going to war This timely study will be of special interest to scholars and students in ethics war and peace and international affairs

Genre And The Invention Of The Writer Anis Bawarshi,2003-12-01 In a focused and compelling discussion Anis Bawarshi looks to genre theory for what it can contribute to a refined understanding of invention In describing what he calls the genre function he explores what is at stake for the study and teaching of writing to imagine invention as a way that writers locate themselves via genres within various positions and activities He argues in fact that invention is a process in which writers are acted upon by genres as much as they act themselves Such an approach naturally requires the composition scholar to re place invention from the writer to the sites of action the genres in which the writer participates This move calls for a thoroughly rhetorical view of invention roughly in the tradition of Richard Young Janice Lauer and those who have followed them Instead of mastering notions of good writing Bawarshi feels that students gain more from learning how to adapt socially and rhetorically as they move from one genred site of action to the next California.
