Environmental Security in Latin America Gavin O'Toole, 2017-05-18 This book examines security in Latin America through an environmental lens at a time when this region faces a broad and growing spectrum of threats The book considers the backdrop against which security debates about Latin America have been conducted the extent to which scholarship has been dominated by traditional US strategic concerns and how in the changing context at the end of the Cold War some policymakers within Latin America itself at both national and regional levels began to reposition security It argues that traditional security scholarship focusing on military defence and strategic affairs in this region is hard to explain and out of date and offers reasons why a new focus on environmental threats within a broader human security perspective has much to offer this field Such a focus is justified by the scale of the challenges that environmental degradation is posing in Latin America and the very real impact of climate change there The book considers how the various theoretical possibilities of the term environmental security all have some potential application to this region where the natural environment is rapidly being securitized by military forces on behalf of their states Finally it proposes that a fruitful approach to Latin America might be one where human and environmental security have parity This book will be of interest to students of environmental security Latin American security human geography and IR in general      Handbook of Governance and Security James

aims to examine the conceptions and practices of security adopted by Regional Organisations ROs across the globe Since the end of the Cold War there has been an increased focus on regions as a relevant realm for security with actors within regional contexts identifying a significant degree of interdependency between one another As a consequence international security has taken on a distinct regionally institutionalised character as seen by the increase in calls for greater utilisation of Chapter VIII Regional Arrangements of the UN in order to create a devolved UN led system of global security management However the idea of a system of global security management is a remote prospect because divergence seems to be as important as commonality in terms of regional security In light of the above Regional Organisations and Security analyses the primary ROs that are active in Africa Asia Eurasia the Middle East and South America The findings of individual case studies are compiled to highlight disparities and similarities in how security is seen prioritised understood practised managed and implemented across regions On this basis the authors reach conclusions about whether we live in an increasingly globalised or regionally distinct world and go on to assess the prospects for a globalised system of security management and consider how this might be developed and organised This book will be of interest to students of comparative regionalism international organisations international security and IR      Lessons from Regional Responses to Security, Health and Environmental
