Regional Development Theories & Their Application Benjamin Howard Higgins, Donald J. Savoie, 1995 Throughout the world today we are seeing former nation states as different as Yugoslavia Somalia and Canada breaking up or threatening to break up into regions The conflicts are economic social ethnic linguistic religious political and cultural Regional Development Theories and Their Application analyzes the reasons for these conflicts and shows why attempts to eliminate regional disparities within nations have been largely unsuccessful Part I of the book is an exposition analysis and critique of various theories of regional development Part II presents case studies in the United States Great Britain the European Community Australia and less developed countries Part III outlines the lessons learned from past experience and sketches a new political economy of regional development Higgins and Savoie demonstrate that new knowledge is more likely to be discovered if social scientists work at the regional and community levels rather than exclusively at the macrolevel national economy society and polity or the microlevel the household firm industry and local government Regional Development Theories and Their Application provides a readable comprehensible survey of the literature and current debates in the fields of regional economics development policy and planning It lays the foundation for improved social and economic policy and theoretical synthesis that will be of interest to sociologists economists professionals working in regional development and political scientists and theorists

Regional Development in Australia Robyn Eversole, 2015-12-22 In Australia regions are not just geographic locations they are also cultural ideas Being regional means being located outside the nation's capital cities and in the periphery of its centres of power and influence Regional development in Australia is thus significantly different than its European or American counterparts However surprisingly little has been written about the unique dynamics of development in Australia's regions this book has been written to fill this gap In recent decades the Australian government has made repeated policy efforts to achieve sustainable development in its non metropolitan areas Over the same period those who live and work outside the nation's capital cities have come to identify as regional Australians This book takes an anthropological approach to understanding the particularities of regional development in Australia It draws upon rich on the ground observations of towns industries universities development organisations and communities across different settings to provide an in depth understanding of the subject This book will be of interest to researchers and practitioners concerned with regional development and policy

Vector Calculus in Regional Development Analysis Kesra Nermend, 2009-04-29 Methods used for regional development analysis are employed mainly to make forecasts and comparisons Forecasting models of various types e g econometric models are usually used for forecasting Recently vector autoregressive models VAR have become popular These models were proposed by Sims in 1980 On the contrary taxonomic methods that are in the center of attention as far as the present publication is concerned are most often employed to make comparisons Linear ordering methods including standard methods are the most popular among taxonomic methods They are based on different distance and similarity measures which leads to the fact that they do not always provide reliable information When for example one construes the standard for a base year and then compares it with data for other years it may turn out that the measure determined will have worse values than the standard for a real object region micro region although this object is better from the standard Hence one must look for new methods employed in regional development analysis or improve hitherto existing ones in such a way so that information obtained reflects the reality to a larger extent The main aim of the present publication is to work out methodological basis for regional development analysis based on vector calculus together with assumptions about computer system supporting the implementation of the method suggested
