Novak, 2022-03-29 The activist state of the New Deal started forming decades before the FDR administration demonstrating the deep roots of energetic government in America In the period between the Civil War and the New Deal American governance was transformed with momentous implications for social and economic life A series of legal reforms gradually brought an end to nineteenth century traditions of local self government and associative citizenship replacing them with positive statecraft governmental activism intended to change how Americans lived and worked through legislation regulation and public administration The last time American public life had been so thoroughly altered was in the late eighteenth century at the founding and in the years immediately following William J Novak shows how Americans translated new conceptions of citizenship social welfare and economic democracy into demands for law and policy that delivered public services and vindicated people s rights Over the course of decades Americans progressively discarded earlier understandings of the reach and responsibilities of government and embraced the idea that legislators and administrators in Washington could tackle economic regulation and social welfare problems As citizens witnessed the successes of an energetic interventionist state they demanded more of the same calling on politicians and civil servants to address unfair competition and labor exploitation form public utilities and reform police power Arguing against the myth that America was a weak state until the New Deal New Democracy traces a steadily aggrandizing authority well before the Roosevelt years The United States was flexing power domestically and intervening on behalf of redistributive goals for far longer than is commonly recognized putting the lie to libertarian claims that the New Deal was an aberration in American history Implementation of the Toxic Substances Control Act, the PCB Rule, and Federal Hazardous Substance Laws Concerning the Performance of the Environmental Protection Agency in the Matter of the Texas Eastern Gas Pipeline Company United States.
