The New Environmental Regulation Daniel J. Fiorino, 2006 Winner 2007 Louis Brownlow Award presented by the National Academy of Public Administration NAPA and 2006 Best Book in Environmental Management and Policy American Society for Public Administration Environmental regulation in the United States has succeeded to a certain extent in solving the problems it was designed to address air water and land are indisputably cleaner and in better condition than they would be without the environmental controls put in place since 1970 But Daniel Fiorino argues in The New Environmental Regulation that given recent environmental economic and social changes it is time for a new more effective model of environmental problem solving Fiorino provides a comprehensive but concise overview of U S environmental regulation its history its rationale and its application and offers recommendations for a more collaborative flexible and performance based alternative Traditional environmental regulation was based on the increasingly outdated assumption that environmental protection and business are irreversibly at odds The new environmental regulation Fiorino describes is based on performance rather than on a narrow definition of compliance and uses such policy instruments as market incentives and performance measurement It takes into consideration differences in the willingness and capabilities of different firms to meet their environmental obligations and it encourages innovation by allowing regulated industries especially the better performers more flexibility in how they achieve environmental goals Fiorino points to specific programs including the 33 50 Program innovative permitting and the use of covenants as environmental policy instruments in the Netherlands that have successfully pioneered these new strategies By bringing together such a wide range of research and real world examples Fiorino has created an invaluable resource for practitioners and scholars and an engaging text for environmental policy courses

International Harmonization of Financial Regulation? Hyoungh-kyu Chey, 2014-01-02 It is often argued that international financial regulation has been substantially strengthened over the past decades through the international harmonization of financial regulation There are however still frequent outbreaks of painful financial crises including the recent 2008 global financial crisis This raises doubts about the conventional claims of the strengthening of international financial regulation This book provides an in depth political economy study of the adoptions in Japan Korea and Taiwan of the 1988 Basel Capital Accord the now so called Basel I which has been at the center of international banking regulation over the past three decades highlighting the domestic politics surrounding it The book illustrates that despite banks formal compliance with the Accord in these countries their compliance was often cosmetic due to extensive regulatory forbearance that allowed their real capital soundness to weaken Domestic politics thus ultimately determined national implementations of the Accord This book provides its novel innovative study of the Accord through scores of interviews with bank regulators and analysis of various primary documents It suggests that the actual effectiveness of international financial regulation relies ultimately on the domestic politics surrounding it It implies as well that the past trend of international harmonization of financial regulation may be illusory to at least some extent in terms of its actual effectiveness This book may interest not only political economists but also scholars working on the intersection of law economics and institutions

Implementing European Environmental Policy Matthieu Glachant, 2001-12-21 This significant book investigates the political economy of environmental policy in Europe with a careful analysis of how EU directives are realised in the member states The authors explore this issue through a comparative evaluation of the implementation of three pieces of EU environmental legislation in France Germany the Netherlands and the UK Areas covered by the legislation include air emission standards for waste incinerators the electricity supply industry and the certification of environmental management systems The results vary across cases even though overcompliance is observed in certain cases The regularity arising from the different case studies is related to the determinants of the environmental outcomes that are observed When environmental directives are implemented they are likely to interact with parallel policy processes and these interactions can exert a strong positive or negative influence on the success of the policy in question The central policy problem is the fact that these interactions are very difficult to anticipate at the policy formulation stage It leads the authors to propose that effective environmental policy should therefore be adaptable in order to cope with these unanticipated effects

Ahead of the Curve K. Green, P. Groenewegen, P.S. Hofman, 2012-12-06 The debate on sustainable production often ends in discussions on the feasibility of far reaching changes in relation to the competitiveness of companies Industry itself and policy makers tend to back away from engaging in profound processes of industrial transformation Examples of companies who have voluntarily moved beyond what is seen as reasonable and feasible can overcome this deadlock This book collects a fine sample of companies who have taken up their responsibility in this respect To quote the editors of this book They are cases that might provide other firms and policy makers with ideas for innovative environmental responses that are outside the slowly rising trend of improvement that we are currently observing in short the cases are of firms and ideas that are ahead of the curve

The editors and many of the authors of this volume are members of the Greening of Industry Network and have been debating with one another for years. Founded in 1991, the Greening of Industry Network comprises over 1500 individuals representing academia, business, public interest, labor, and government from more than 50 countries. Participants work together to build policies and strategies toward creating a sustainable future through many vehicles: coordinating research efforts, publications, planning, and participating in workshops, public forums, and conferences. To provide benefit to broader society, the Network stimulates public dialogue and brings together academic researchers from many disciplines with other stakeholders who traditionally do not work together in coalitions.

Environmental Politics in Southern Europe K. Eder, M. Kousis, 2012-12-06. Europe is sometimes credited with a polis but not a demos. Political integration and economic globalisation cannot diminish local identity and social memories. This fascinating collection of national case studies shows why there will always be a local demos located in ecology, economy, and society. But there will never be a transnational demos precisely because locality is the basis for meaningful sustainability. Long may it triumph. Tim O'Riordan, CSERGE, University of East Anglia. The book offers a refreshing perspective on the diversity of Europe and at the same time on the interdependence of the policies, economies, and societies of European countries. Going beyond the dichotomies of good and bad and leaders and laggards in environmental matters, the authors contribute to a different understanding of the North-South divide in the process of European integration. Angela Liberatore, European Commission Directorate General for Research. This is a self-consciously revisionist volume whose findings are theoretically significant, policy relevant, and timely. Its insistence on bringing society back in its debunking of the notion of a Mediterranean syndrome, its emphasis on developmental leapfrogging, capacity of late comers to emerge as leaders in contexts of late modernity, and its systematic attempt to reconceptualize the politics of Europeanization should be carefully listed to students and policy makers concerned with collective action. Southern Europe: European integration and environmental politics. P. Nikiforos Diamandouros, University of Athens.

Ecosociology Sources. Series: «Ecosociology» I. Kulyasov, 2017-12-13. In the book, the theoretical sources and the development of ecosociology are covered. Designed for ecosocialism graduate and undergraduate students, ecologists, ecopolitical, and embezlement.

The Handbook of Environmental Voluntary Agreements Edoardo Croci, 2005-10-06 EDOARDO CROCI IEFE Universit Bocconi Milano Italy

Voluntary approaches in environmental policy represent a third wave of regulation in the environmental field Command and control was the first wave Its core is based on uniform emission standards the respect of which needs to be enforced through extensive monitoring and severe sanctions The expected cost of sanction for non compliance calculated as its amount multiplied for the probability to be caught must be superior to the benefits of non compliance in order to let the sanction be effective As the benefits of non compliance can vary among firms sanctions need to be very high in order to be effective In fact sanctions are ordinary correlated to environmental damage and not to the benefits of non compliance But very high sanctions can be difficult to enforce as they appear unfair and can lead to dramatic consequences on firms and workers up to shut downs of plants Ambient standards reduce these problems but oblige the regulator to know a huge amount of information regarding the specific contribution of each polluter to the polluted body Information is difficult to obtain because of asymmetric information and costly to produce because it requires large and skilled regulating and enforcing organizations Nevertheless complex regulation is the base of any environmental policy framework as it allows the policy maker to fully exercise its power of composition of various interests in a relatively transparent way Economic instruments were the second wave
