Abstract: Islam in the history and modernization of the Maldives demonstrates an intrinsic tension, serving both as the foundational cornerstone of national identity and as the source of social conflict and political division. On the one hand, the narrative of being a “100% Muslim nation” has shaped a highly unified national identity, achieving legalization and institutionalization within the power structure and becoming a critical pillar of state legitimacy and social integration. On the other hand, the politicization and homogenization of religion have weakened social inclusivity, exacerbating religious extremism and social tensions in the face of globalization. The Maldivian experience not only reveals how religion undergoes self-transformation through power negotiation and legal reform but also reflects how the tension between traditional religion and the modern state shapes the dynamic framework of national governance. As a microcosm of global religious renaissance and geopolitical interaction, the Maldives offers a vital theoretical perspective and practical insights for understanding the complex interplay among religion, power, and national identity.

1. Introduction

In today’s world, where globalization meets the resurgence of religion, one of the key challenges for modern societies is finding a balance between preserving traditional culture and achieving effective governance (Hovsepnyan 2023). For small nations deeply rooted in religious traditions, this balance becomes even more significant, as religion often goes beyond being a belief system and plays a central role in shaping national identity and state power (Issa and Yasin 2024).

The Maldives, a small island nation in South Asia known as a “100% Muslim state,” offers a compelling case for examining this dynamic (Pyriard 2010). Since the arrival of Islam in the Maldives in the 12th century, the religion has become more than just a spiritual practice—it has grown into a cultural foundation for national identity and a cornerstone of political legitimacy. On the one hand, Islam has been institutionalized and embedded into official narratives, providing a sense of unity and political stability. On the other hand, the forces of globalization and the renaissance of religious sentiment have given rise to challenges, such as the politicization and even radicalization of religion, which pose risks to social cohesion and national security (Zellman and Malji 2023).

Although previous studies have shed light on the historical influence of Islam and its role in governance, most focus on specific periods or isolated aspects (Forbes 1983; Maniku 1986; Hashemi 2009; Shama 2018; Zahur 2021, 2023a), leaving the broader dual role of Women and Development Jamal Sanad Al-Suwaidi, 2020-03-16 His Excellency Prof Jamal Sanad Al Suwaidi, Director General of the Emirates Center for Strategic Studies and Research, has published a new book titled Women and Development which addresses over four chapters major issues relevant to Arab Islamic thought regarding women and their role in development. His Excellency believes that women's problems are in fact society's problems and these problems will not be solved without the involvement of government and private organizations and society as a whole. Improving the status of women and promoting their participation in development is the concern of the entire country. The author puts forth arguments proving the unsustainable rhetoric voiced by regressive political Islam which sought through selective interpretation of Islamic texts to impose restrictions on the freedom of women and their participation in the development process. The author also provides practical responses to urgent questions regarding the status of women in Islam such as their access to education and presence in labor markets in relation to men. In this regard the author refers to statistics and survey data as well as analytical readings of the circumstances involving women's rights in GCC countries. In the last chapter the author explores the status of women in the United Arab Emirates as they set a role model for Gulf and Arab women. This model was shaped by the late Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan Al Nahyan may God rest his soul in peace through his open and insightful thought and implemented through effective policies and programs.
