

EXPLORING JUPITER'S MOONS

Name	Date	Mission highlights
Voyager 1	Mar 79	Images of Galilean moons and Amalthea. Io volcanism found. Metis and Thebe discovered. First close-ups of Europa. Closest view of Ganymede to date. Adrastea discovered.
Voyager 2	Jul 79
Galileo	Jan 87– Sep 03	Detailed images and data from Galilean moons. Evidence for ocean below Europa's surface.

GANYMEDE
Jupiter's largest satellite is bigger than the planet Mercury. The Galileo mission discovered that Ganymede has its own magnetosphere, which made scientists revise their ideas about its structure. Previously they thought the moon had a rocky core surrounded by water with a crust of ice on the surface. They now think Ganymede's core is molten iron surrounded by a rocky mantle with an ice shell.

Ganymede's surface has faults similar to the San Andreas fault in California, where grooves have slipped sideways.

CALLISTO

The surface of Callisto is completely covered with craters, dating from the birth of Jupiter's system. Callisto consists of about 60 percent rock and iron and 40 percent ice and water. The Galileo mission detected variations in the magnetic field around the moon. Scientists think the variations may be caused by electric currents flowing in a salty ocean beneath Callisto's icy crust.

Volcanoes can send up plumes of gas 155 miles (250 km) high. Many giant volcanoes are erupting on the moon at any one time.

Io is covered with volcanoes, molten sulphur lakes, lava flows and mountains up to 26,250 ft (8,000 m) high.

IO

The gravities of Jupiter, Europa, and Ganymede tug and push at Io, bending the crust back and forth. The moon generates heat as molecules bump and grind against one another. As a result, Io is the most volcanically active body in the Solar System. It has a thin atmosphere of sulphur dioxide.

OBSERVING MOONS

It is possible to track the changing positions of the four Galilean moons over a few hours with a good pair of binoculars. The moons played a vital role in the history of astronomy: the fact that they orbited another planet showed that not everything revolved around the Earth.

Alien Oceans Kevin Hand, 2021-09-21 Inside the epic quest to find life on the water rich moons at the outer reaches of the solar system Where is the best place to find life beyond Earth We often look to Mars as the most promising site in our solar system but recent scientific missions have revealed that some of the most habitable real estate may actually lie farther away Beneath the frozen crusts of several of the small ice covered moons of Jupiter and Saturn lurk vast oceans that may have existed for as long as Earth and together may contain more than fifty times its total volume of liquid water Could there be organisms living in their depths Alien Oceans reveals the science behind the thrilling quest to find out Kevin Peter Hand is one of today's leading NASA scientists and his pioneering research has taken him on expeditions around the world In this captivating account of scientific discovery he brings together insights from planetary science biology and the adventures of scientists like himself to explain how we know that oceans exist within moons of the outer solar system like Europa Titan and Enceladus He shows how the exploration of Earth's oceans is informing our understanding of the potential habitability of these icy moons and draws lessons from what we have learned about the origins of life on our own planet to consider how life could arise on these distant worlds Alien Oceans describes what lies ahead in our search for life in our solar system and beyond setting the stage for the transformative discoveries that may await us
