Yates,2007-08-01 A major phase of economic expansion occurred in southern England during the second and early first millennium BC accompanied by a fundamental shift in regional power and wealth towards the eastern lowlands This book offers a synthesis of available data on Bronze Age lowland field systems in England including a gazetteer of sites The research demonstrates the importance of large scale animal husbandry in the mixed farming regimes as evidenced in the design of the field systems which incorporate droveways stock proof fencing watering holes cow pens sheep races and gateways for stockhandling It is argued that the field systems represented a form of conspicuous production an intensification of agrarian endeavour or a statement of intent to be understood in relation to the maintenance display and promotion of hierarchical social systems involved in exchange with their counterparts across the English Channel

J. Bradley, Martin T. Green, 1991-02-22 Cranborne Chase in central southern England is the area where British field archaeology developed in its modern form The site of General Pitt Rivers pioneering excavations in the nineteenth century Cranborne Chase also provides a microcosm of virtually all the major types of field monument present in southern England as a whole Much of the archaeological material has fortuitously survived offering the fullest chronological cover of any part of the prehistoric British landscape Martin Green began working in this region in 1968 and was joined by John Barrett and Richard Bradley in 1977 for a fuller programme of survey and excavation that lasted for nearly ten years In this important study they apply some of the questions in prehistory to one of the first regions of the country to be studied in such detail The book is a regional study of long term change in British prehistory and contains a unique collection of data A landmark in the archaeological literature it will be essential reading for students and scholars of British prehistory and social and historical geography and also for all those involved with archaeological methods Science in the Romantic Era David

Knight, 2016-03-31 First published in 1998 The Romantic Era was a time when society religion and other beliefs and science were all in flux The idea that the universe was a great clock and that men were little clocks all built by a divine watchmaker was giving way to a more dynamic and pantheistic way of thinking A new language was invented for chemistry replacing metaphor with algebra and scientific illustration came to play the role of a visual language deeply involved with theory A scientific community came gradually into being as the 19th century wore on The papers which compose this book have appeared in a wide range of books and journals together with the new introduction they illuminate science and its context in the Romantic Era and follow its effects in the 19th century The Journal of the Royal Society of Antiquaries of

Report of the Library Syndicate for the Year ... Cambridge University Library, 1907 Archaeology, Economy and Society David A. Hinton, 2002-03-11 Many books have been written on particular aspects of medieval archaeology or on particular parts of the period but synthesis across the whole spectrum has not been attempted before The aim of this book is to examine the contribution that archaeology can make to an understanding of the social economic religious and other developments that took place in England from the migrations of the fifth and sixth centuries to the beginning of the Renaissance showing how society and economy evolved in that time span Drawing on the latest available material the book takes a chronological approach to the archaeological material of the post Roman period in order to emphasize the changes that can be observed in the physical evidence and some of the reasons for them that can be suggested The environment in which people functioned and how they expressed themselves for example in their houses and burial practices their pottery and their clothes show how they were constrained by social customs and economic pressures Roman and Medieval

Exeter and their Hinterlands Stephen Rippon, Neil Holbrook, 2021-04-30 This first volume presenting research carried out through the Exeter A Place in Time project provides a synthesis of the development of Exeter within its local regional national and international hinterlands Exeter began life in c AD 55 as one of the most important legionary bases within early Roman Britain and for two brief periods in the early and late 60s AD Exeter was a critical centre of Roman power within the new province When the legion moved to Wales the fortress was converted into the civitas capital for the Dumnonii Its development as a town was however relatively slow reflecting the gradual pace at which the region as a whole adapted to being part of the Roman world The only evidence we have for occupation within Exeter between the 5th and 8th centuries is for a church in what was later to become the Cathedral Close In the late 9th century however Exeter became a defended burh and this was followed by the revival of urban life Exeter s wealth was in part derived from its central role in the south west s tin industry and by the late 10th century Exeter was the fifth most productive mint in England Exeter s importance continued to grow as it became an episcopal and royal centre and excavations within Exeter have revealed important material culture assemblages that reflect its role as an international port
