Richards,2007 In most developed countries a high proportion of the population up to 50 percent now enter higher education at some time in their lives Higher education is therefore very important to national economies both as a significant industry in its own right and as a source of trained and educated personnel for the rest of the economy It follows that there are enormous stakes involved for a particular country even though the payoff of serious reforms may take decades and thus be counterproductive to the political forces responsible for designing and implementing such reforms since their horizons tend to be very short This new book tackles important issues in this dynamic field Reconceptualising Feedback in Higher Education Stephen Merry,Margaret Price,David Carless,Maddalena Taras,2013-07-18 Feedback is a crucial element of teaching learning and assessment There is however substantial evidence that staff and students are dissatisfied with it and there is growing impetus for change Student Surveys have indicated that feedback is one of the most problematic aspects of the student experience and so particularly in need of further scrutiny Current practices waste both student learning potential and staff resources Up until now the ways of addressing these problems has been through relatively minor interventions based on the established model of feedback providing information but the change that is required is more fundamental and far reaching Reconceptualising Feedback in Higher Education coming from a think tank composed of specialist expertise in assessment feedback is a direct and more fundamental response to the impetus for change Its purpose is to challenge established beliefs and practices through critical evaluation of evidence and discussion of the renewal of current feedback practices In promoting a new conceptualisation and a repositioning of assessment feedback within an enhanced and more coherent paradigm of student learning this book analyses the current issues in feedback practice and their implications for student learning identifies the key characteristics of effective feedback practices explores the changes needed to feedback practice and how they can be brought about illustrates through examples how processes to promote and sustain effective feedback practices can be embedded in modern mass higher education Provoking academics to think afresh about the way they conceptualise and utilise feedback this book will help those with responsibility for strategic development of assessment at an institutional level educational developers course management teams researchers tutors and student representatives

Higher Education David Andrew Turner, 2012-01-01 The quality of higher education is a hot topic especially as students around the world are asked to pay more towards their own education and expect to get what they pay for In addition league tables both national and international have come to dominate discussion with several governments and many institutions setting themselves the goal of improving their ratings In this volume Professor Turner examines the assumptions that are being made about what counts as quality and what the traditional purposes of universities are But with the growth of mass higher education and the rise of student centred approaches to learning and teaching it has become increasingly clear that high quality education is education that meets the needs of the student at that particular moment and promotes their future development After examining a range of different approaches to the quality of higher education and its measurement Professor Turner develops an approach to benchmarking and quality enhancement that is better suited to the ethos of individualised learning and uses it to critique the philosophies that have dominated debates about quality to date This book will be of interest to scholars of higher education but also has something important to add to debates that engage policy makers in higher education It provides a background to the historical development of universities which might help postgraduate students and new members of faculty understand the process in which they are engaged Engaging
