Regan,2012-12-06 Although the history of photomedicine dates back thousands of years with even preliterate cultures appreciating the healing properties of sunlight for many workers in the discipline photomedicine is associated with the observation about 100 years ago of Niels Finsen a Danish physician Finsen recognized that people with tuberculosis who lived in Norway and who had very little exposure to sunlight often developed facial lesions lupus vulgaris which would decrease and sometimes disappear during the summer months This very observant physician reasoned that artificial light ought to produce the same effect as sunlight and began utilizing the radiation from the newly available carbon arc At first he used a glass lens to concentrate the radiation but since this produced considerable burning he replaced this with a hollow glass lens filled with water However while this reduced the heat burns it did not actually duplicate the effect of direct sunlight Finally using a hollow lens filled with water but equipped with quartz windows Finsen was able to imitate even improve upon the effect of sunlight As a result lupus vulgaris was practically eliminated from the Scandinavian countries The NLM Technical Bulletin ,1977 The Journal of Experimental Medicine ,1974-04 Communicating Science Eileen Scanlon,Roger Hill,Kirk Junker,1999 This volume traces the modern critical and performance history of this play one of Shakespeare s most loved and most performed comedies The essay focus on such modern concerns as feminism deconstruction textual theory and queer theory Thymus Involvement in Immunity and Disease W. three carrying an apparently localized tumor have a few cancer cells outside the area where the tumor seems localized b when apparently complete regression or even an apparently complete remission is induced by chemotherapy not all the neoplastic cells have been eradicated In both cases an imperceptible residual neoplasm persists the growth of which will in due course make it perceptible again giving rise to metastasis or to a systemic or localized relapse There is thus an urgent need for a new technique capable of killing the last cell or cells Our experiments in mice on the effectiveness of active immunotherapy which involves the manipulation of the immune machinery have shown that this treatment is able to kill all the cells down to the very last cell of a given leukemia provided that the total number of cells does not exceed a few thousand
