Population and Family in the Low Countries 1995 Hans van den Brekel, F. Deven, 2012-12-06 EDITORS Hans VAN DEN BREKEL and Fred DEVEN NIDI P O Box 11650 2502 AR The Hague The Netherlands CBGS Markiesstraat 1 1000 Brussels Belgium The series Population and Family in the Low Countries POPFAM established in 1976 aims to introduce selected issues of demographic research in Flanders Belgium and the Netherlands to an international audience The publication series results from cooperation between the Netherlands Interdisciplinary Demographic Institute NIDI The Hague and the Flemish Population and Family Study Centre CBGS Brussels This 1995 edition is the 111th in the series In 1995 the NIDI celebrates its 25th anniversary as the Dutch national demographic institute making it a special year for Dutch demography The contents of this publication obviously highlights this event as most articles selected for this edition are written by Dutch or NIDI related scholars The article Ageing and the demand for care scenario studies for Europe by Hanna van Solinge and Jenny de Jong Gierveld concerns a comparative study with respect to the consequences of ageing populations for the infrastructure of care for the elderly It presents results of a scenario study on future developments in demand and supply of elderly care services for a selected number of European countries summarizing an extensive study on the impact of ageing populations on the socio medical system conducted by the authors on behalf of the European Population Committee of the Council of Europe

Population Forecasting 1895-1945 H.A. de Gans, 2012-12-06 Authors scholars and scientists whose mother tongue is not one of the major languages of international communication are seriously disadvantaged Some individuals such as Joseph Conrad or Vladimir Nabokov have overcome that handicap brilliantly Others learn to live with it they can express themselves sufficiently lucidly in a second language to make their voice heard internationally At least when they have something original or striking to say they will be certain to reach their peers Most scientists and scholars fall into that category Others again have to wait until their work has been translated before its value is recognised This may apply even to those whose mother tongue is widely read The writings of Frenchmen Lyotard Derrida Baudrillard or Foucault on post modernism on language discourse and power for example had tremendous world wide impact only after English translations appeared on the market De Gans study of the development of population forecasting in The Netherlands is another striking illustration of the effects a language barrier may have He demonstrates convincingly that although a possibly somewhat awkward Dutchman named Wiebols was a pioneer of modern cohort component demographic forecasting he never received international recognition for this In his thesis of 1925 Wiebols employed the newest instruments of demographic analysis in improving forecasting methodology European Populations Van der Kaa, 2012-12-06 The changing demographic landscape which Europe is facing today and in the next decades reflects the past These changes constitute important challenges to European populations and societies Shifts in fertility and family formation in health morbidity and mortality in internal and international migration as well as changes in age structures in households in labour forces and in population growth and decline will influence the living conditions and well being of Europe's population directly or indirectly. The demographic challenge also concerns the environment, local, regional and national developments, education, production and consumption patterns, economic competitiveness, social security, housing, employment and transport and health and social care provisions. These issues, their mechanisms, determinants and consequences also challenge the scientific study of population. As a major forum and market place for scientific demographic debate, the 1999 European Population Conference EPC99 was organized to take up this challenge. On the threshold of the third millennium, European populations are united in diversity and face major demographic issues. Strong family and low fertility: a paradox? Gianpiero Dalla Zuanna, Giuseppe A.

Micheli, 2006-03-30. New perspectives in interpreting contemporary family and reproductive behaviour of Mediterranean Europe. 1. THE NEW GEOGRAPHY OF FERTILITY AND THE FAMILY IN EUROPE. The countries of southern Europe have begun to reduce conjugal fertility at a later date compared to most other nations in the west. This has been plained by means of the category of delay, the backwardness of the processes of accumulation and economic development being seen as the cause of the maintaining of the reproductive models of the past. Moreover, the influence of the Catholic Church in Italy, Spain and Portugal is supposed to have delayed the processes of secularisation, rendering difficult the changes in mentality necessary for assuming modern patterns of reproductive behaviour, not only for fertility but also for the variables which are strictly linked to it, such as sexuality, contraception and abortion. Livi Bacci 1977, Lesthaeghe and Wilson 1986. 1.1 The trends of very low fertility. Now the panorama is very different. Since the mid seventies, southern Europe has been washed by the tide of a lowest low fertility, i.e. TFR under 1.5 for several a prolonged period. Billari et al 2003, which in some areas, 1 has reached and maintained scarcely imaginable levels for years on end. Conversely, other areas of Europe where fertility started to fall many decades earlier than in the regions of the south, have recovered or maintained considerably higher levels of fertility, often close to replacement level. Forecasting Mortality in Developed Countries E. Tabeau, Anneke van den Berg Jeths, Christopher Heathcote, 2006-04-11. Information on future mortality trends is essential for population forecasts, public health policy, actuarial studies and many other purposes. Realising the importance of such needs, this volume contains contributions to the theory and practice of forecasting mortality in the relatively favourable circumstances in developed countries of Western Europe. In this context, techniques from mathematical statistics and econometrics can provide useful descriptions of past mortality. The naive forecast obtained by extrapolating a fitted model may give as good a forecast as any, but forecasting by extrapolation requires careful justification since it assumes the prolongation of historical conditions. On the other hand, whilst it is generally accepted that scientific and other advances will continue to impact on mortality, perhaps dramatically, so it is impossible to quantify more than the outline of future consequences with a strong degree of confidence. The decision to modify an extrapolation of a model fitted to historical data or conversely choosing not to modify it in order to obtain a forecast is therefore strongly influenced by subjective and judgmental elements, with the quality of the latter dependent on demographic epidemiological and indeed perhaps more general considerations The thread running through the book reflects therefore the necessity of integrating demographic epidemiological and statistical factors to obtain an improvement in the prediction of mortality Childbearing Trends and Prospects in Low-Fertility Countries Tomas Frejka, Jean-Paul Sardon, 2005-12-30 This is a tour de force in cohort fertility analysis a deep and powerful piece of work It is a striking demonstration of the force of really detailed empirical analysis of excellent and comprehensive data with the data looked at from every angle and judiciously extrapolated into the future It represents a major contribution to our understanding of contemporary low fertility in Europe and other developed nations Thomas K Burch University of Victoria BC Canada Diversity in Family Formation Joop de Beer, F. Deven, 2013-03-09 The aim of Diversity in Family Formation is to examine changes in the start of the family formation process Rather than giving a rough overview of demographic changes in many countries a comparison of differences in changes in family formation and fertility behaviour between Belgium and The Netherlands is interesting for various reasons First even though the economic and cultural differences between these countries are relatively small there is one important difference Belgium is predominantly Catholic whereas The Netherlands has about equal proportions of Catholics and Protestants Second if the Second Demographic Transition implies that there is one common pattern of change in different European countries and that differences across countries are due to the fact that countries are in a different stage of the transition process and if it is assumed that the transition process started earlier in Protestant countries than in Catholic countries one would expect The Netherlands to be in a further stage of the transition process than Belgium Thus an in depth comparison of changes in family formation and fertility behaviour between both countries may give us more insight in the question of whether there is one common transition process The comparison of fertility and family survey data in both countries brings us to the core question of whether there is one common explanation for differences between countries in various types of fertility and family behaviour under consideration namely fertility regulation the choice of living arrangement after leaving the parental home and the labour force participation of mothers

Education and Postponement of Maternity Siv Gustafsson, Adriaan Kalwij, 2006-09-12 One of the most important demographic issues of our time is the increasing age of women at motherhood This happens in the northern social democratic states Sweden and Norway in the catholic countries Italy Spain and Ireland in the West European countries Netherlands and Germany in the former socialist transition countries Czech Republic and East Germany and in the liberal democracy of the United States The postponement of maternity and the related issue of declining fertility rates are of major interest to policy makers and have provoked much scientific research This book examines various economic aspects of the role of women's education in the postponement of maternity in these ten industrialized countries The chapters in this book each empirically investigate one of these countries using individual or household survey data and are in particular interested in the increasing age at motherhood with the investment in education of the mother In search of socio economic explanations for this relationship each chapter investigates a specific related research question This results in a book that covers a wide range of topics on the economics of fertility decisions such as career planning motives of women consumption smoothing motives of households and the role of institutions Children and Media Bea Van den Bergh,2000 Offers a large array of approaches to studying children and the media including views from communication theory and history with methodologies such as quantitative analysis ethnographic studies and theoretical inferences Who Marries Whom? Hans-Peter Blossfeld,A. Timm,2012-12-06 Marriage and social inequality are closely interrelated Marriage is dependent on the structure of marriage markets and marriage patterns have consequences for social inequality This book demonstrates that in most modern societies the educational system has become an increasingly important marriage market particularly for those who are highly qualified Educational expansion in general and the rising educational participation of women in particular unintentionally have increased the rate of assortative meeting and assortative mating across birth cohorts Rising educational homogamy means that social inequality is further enhanced through marriage because better and worse educated single men and women pool their economic and sociocultural advantages and disadvantages within couples In this book we study the changing role of the educational system as a marriage market in modern societies from a cross national comparative perspective Using life history data from a broad range of industrialized countries and longitudinal statistical models we analyze the process of spouse selection in the life courses of single men and women step by step The countries included in this book vary widely in important characteristics such as demographic behavior and institutional characteristics The life course approach explicitly recognizes the dynamic nature of partner decisions the importance of educational roles and institutional circumstances as young men and women move through their life paths and the cumulation of advantages and disadvantages experienced by individuals The Cairo Consensus Saul E. Halfon,2007-01-01 The Cairo Consensus explores population policy during the 1990s Starting from the question of how the transition from population control to women s empowerment was formulated as an international consensus Halfon maps the discourses technical practices and institutional practices that made this transition possible and stable The Central and East European Population since 1850 F. Rothenbacher,2016-04-30 This is the third volume of three on demographics All major fields of demographic change are covered Population figures are given for each population census by sex civil status and age Major demographic developments within the family are described providing a commentary on the main population structures and trends Integrated Policies on Gender Relations, Ageing and Migration in Europe Dragana Avramov,R. L. Cliquet,2005 Population and Family in the Low Countries 1996/1997 Hans van den Brekel,Freddy Deven,1997 People, Population Change and Policies Charlotte Höhn,Dragana Avramov,Irena E. Kotowska,2008-03-08 This two volume work explores social cohesion and the demographic challenges of low birth rates and population aging The authors approach the topic from the perspective of citizens and key policy actors analyzing attitudes from 14 European countries regarding the European integration process demographic trends and expectations towards private networks and public policies Volume 2 focuses on demographic developments gender issues and aging International Books in Print ,1997 Communities and Generations Ron J. Lesthaeghe,2000 Het kostwinnersmodel voorbij? W. van Dongen, Eric Vanhaute, Koenraad Pauwels, 1998 Het centrale thema van dit boek is het omschakelingsproces van het traditionele basismodel van de gezinnen ook het kostwinnersmodel genoemd naar het nieuwe basismodel namelijk het tweebanen twee inkomensmodel In deze bundel behandelen Vlaamse en Nederlandse onderzoekers werkzaam in diverse disciplines en op diverse domeinen een aantal belangrijke vragen daaromtrent vanuit een historisch en een actueel perspectief Wat zijn de uitgangspunten en de centrale concepten van de twee basismodellen Is het kostwinnersmodel wel zo succesvol geweest en in welke mate is het nog werkzaam Wat zijn de historische wortels van het tweebanenmodel Hoe is de omschakeling zichtbaar op de diverse maatschappelijke domeinen Towards a Democratic Division of Labour in Europe? Van Dongen, Walter, 2009 This book analyses male violence against women and children and the mechanisms society develops to push it out of sight In-group/out-group Behaviour in Modern Societies Kristiaan Thienpont, R. L. Cliquet, 1999
