Population, Labour Force and Employment Ghazi Mumtaz Farooq, Yaw Ofosu, 1992 This monograph is intended as an aid to those concerned with the integration of population and related factors in development planning After an overview of global trends it examines the causes of rapid labour force growth and the determinants of low labour absorption This is followed by a discussion of the policy changes required for meeting the employment challenge

Labour Markets, Poverty, and Development Giorgio Barba Navaretti, Riccardo Faini, Giovanni Zanaldà, 1999 As we reach the turn of the millennium the disparity between developed and developing world is of increasing concern Labour Poverty and Development brings together a worldwide mix of contributors from both the academic and practitioner sides of the current debate combining rigorous economic analysis and broader based theorizing to provide a detailed picture of the causes effects and implications of the current situation in the developing world All the contributions stress the vertical relationship between macro trends and micro functionings of markets Part I deals with the interaction between employment and growth and trade policy investigating the positive relationship between growth and employment and the connection between trade liberalization and better working conditions Part II looks at the situation in urban areas the crucial and often hidden role that the informal sector plays in the urban employment market and its connection to the formal labour sector and the collective decision making involved in gender differentials in education Finally Part III investigates the other side of the rural-urban divide with a detailed micro study of labour supply in rural communes in China and an analysis of a common developing world poverty trap the spiralling relationship between destitution and low productivity

Approaches to Sustainable Development Richard M. Auty, Katrina Brown, 2021-12-24 A definition of sustainable development is that of the Brundtland Commission development which meets the needs of the current generation without jeopardizing the needs of future generations This volume seeks to analyze the economic basis for this definition and to look at the critiques of the economic approach which have their basis in growing disquiet over the role of the productive normative science driving technological change and economic transformation The discussion is followed by studies of the application of the criteria of sustainability to rural problems in South Asia Kenya Nepal and Latin America and to urban industrial problems in Jamaica Chile and Vietnam

Welfare Implications of Demographic Trends Tony Fahey,John D. Fitz Gerald,John Fitz Gerald,1997 This study examines the validity of concerns about demographic trends The authors argue that Ireland is now entering an unprecedented period of demographic advantage and contend that concerns about the implications of an ageing population in Ireland over the next 20 years are exaggerated and a copycat reaction to demographic developments in other countries They believe Ireland remains demographically unique with any greying of the population being counter balanced by reduced child dependency and increasing female labour force participation Report of the Director-general ,1992 Books in Print of the United Nations System United Nations.
