Creating Cyber Libraries Kathleen W. Craver, 2002-05-30 As prices of traditional library materials increase and space to house them shrinks savvy school library media specialists are creating cyber libraries or school libraries on the Internet These libraries offer students and their parents 24 hour access and are invaluable for providing up to date information in a way traditional materials cannot This guide outlines the steps library media specialists can take to create a cyber library provide content and policies for use and maintain it for maximum efficiency Craver justifies the need for cyber libraries in the 21st century and how they can help librarians to meet the standards in Information Power 1998 She explains the different types of cyber libraries available along with their advantages and disadvantages She discusses how to construct them using portals or by acquiring fee based cyber libraries and what policies should be in place to protect both the school and its students Also included are instructions for establishing remote access to subscription databases creating cyber reading rooms and providing instructional services to student users Once a cyber library is created it must be maintained and evaluated to keep it useful and current and this book provides guidelines to do so Finally there is a chapter on promoting the cyber library so the school community is aware of its features and participates in its growth process No school library should be without this volume

Print and Electronic Text Convergence Bill Cope, Diana Kalantzis, 2001 With the progressive digitisation of the book production processes we see the emergence of a potentially potent mix of new technologies Not potent because these technologies are capable of driving change alone but potent for the commercial and cultural drivers which may work in concert with new technologies to transform the world of books and reading Central to these technological developments is the convergence of the technologies of e-text and digital print This book examines recent technological changes in book production Our focus is in part on technological actuality centred mostly on the digitisation of text and its consequences Our focus is also on the realm of possibility Where might these technological shifts lead us What are the commercial and cultural conditions under which technological possibility might bear fruits Within this volume we look specifically at the changing definition of a book A book is no longer a tangible thing a book is what a book does It is information architecture We examine the various manifestations of electronic book readers and imminent technologies such as electronic ink including case study on the use of ebook reading devices by a lending library and speculate about other uses of such devices We see the convergence of print and etext manifestations of the same thing electronically stored text with the difference demonstrated only in the shift in mindset necessary to accommodate emergent forms of digital text as information services within a product service system the changing shape of digital design and changes in printing technologies from letterpress to the rise of digital printing
