Portraiture and British Gothic Fiction

Kamilla Elliott, 2012-12-01 Examples from British writers of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries show how portraits became a new mode of identity for the middle class. Traditionally kings and rulers were featured on stamps and money, the titled and affluent commissioned busts and portraits, and criminals and missing persons appeared on wanted posters. British writers of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, however, reworked ideas about portraiture to promote the value and agendas of the ordinary middle classes. According to Kamilla Elliott, our current practices of picture identification—driver's licenses, passports, and so on—are rooted in these late eighteenth and early nineteenth century debates. Portraiture and British Gothic Fiction examines ways writers such as Horace Walpole, Ann Radcliffe, Mary Shelley, and C. R. Maturin, as well as artists, historians, politicians, and periodical authors, dealt with changes in how social identities were understood and valued in British culture, specifically who was represented by portraits and how they were represented as they vied for social power. Elliott investigates multiple aspects of picture identification: its politics, epistemologies, semiotics, and aesthetics, and the desires and phobias that it produces. Her extensive research not only covers Gothic literature's best-known and most-studied texts but also engages with more than 100 Gothic works in total, expanding knowledge of first-wave Gothic fiction as well as opening new windows into familiar work.

The Hong Kong Widow

Kristen Loesch, 2025-10-07 Hong Kong 1953 In a remote mansion, witnesses insist a massacre took place. The police see nothing but pristine rooms and declare it a collective hallucination. Until decades later, when one witness returns from the Edgar-nominated author of The Last Russian Doll. In the 1950s Hong Kong, Mei is a young refugee of the Chinese Communist revolution, struggling to put her past in Shanghai behind her. When she receives a shocking invitation to take part in a competition in one of the city's most notorious haunted houses, pitting six spirit mediums against one another in a series of six sances over six nights, until a single winner emerges, she has every reason to refuse. Except that the hostess, a former Shanghainese silent film star, is none other than the wife of the man who once destroyed Mei's entire life. It is promised the winner will receive a fortune, but there is only one prize Mei wants: revenge. Decades later, the final night of that competition has become an infamous urban legend. The police were called to the scene of a brutal massacre but found no evidence, dismissing it as a collective hallucination. Mei knows what she saw, but now someone else is convinced they know what she did. She must uncover the truth about the last night she ever spent in that house, even if the ghosts of her past are waiting for her there.
