Portrait Incomplete Musical Memoirs:

Portrait Incomplete Frans Boerlage, 2004-12 Walking to and along the beach of Santa Monica the author's recollections brought on by the music heard on his walkman become the inspiration for his book He used this device for studying the scores of operas he was going to direct Then after his retirement the habit of listening to music remained and brought him pictures of his youth and later life as a director which resulted in material for his hobby just taken up again but this time more seriously WRITING Each piece of music represented a scene of his life his youth in Holland during the war and his life as a student there show his country and the very specifically Dutch ness in those unsettling periods during and just after World War II He had a happy early youth but the war complicated all people's lives to various degrees The liberation brought freedom but also steps back to before the war customs of strict student rules now hardly suitable The fight with his uncertainty about sexual orientation muddied the happy carefree days shared with his colleagues The author takes us from life in well provided circumstances with siblings friends and cousins in summerhouses through school years and life as a student trying the normal path by becoming engaged to a member of age old Dutch nobility and fleeing from his student corset to wild nights in Paris England love life there and drama training change his goal in life he becomes an opera stage director and travels all over the world He starts an important friendship with an older actress with whom he collaborates on plays some of which are produced and a musical with its successful tour Through him we get a glimpse of life in Holland England and the USA and guesting in out of the ordinary places In short as he puts it in Plaisir d amour one of his chapters I have had sexual encounters with many partners of many races colors religions classes and ages These included artists singers an English spy athletes authors etc as well as doctors and other professionals I was f ted in high society and in utter however stylish poverty I was entertained in castles and in shabby attic rooms I have lived It has enriched me not debased me I have a wealth of memories and fond friendships as leftovers from more intimate times I can only hope I did not hurt too many people But this is only a small part of the journey on which the author leads the reader we meet fascinating figures out of the artistic world as well as those from the beau monde We experience the terrible ups and downs of performing live and getting rotten reviews We even arrive at the near pits when the author has lost two well paying jobs and has to live from the dole This is an uplifting book with the bounciness of a tennis ball REVIEWS Portrait Incomplete Musical Memoirs By Frans Boerlage Boerlage's autobiography provides a pleasing balance of personal reminiscence and growth with professional stories and insights The personal information growing up in the Netherlands during World War II student days in Europe personal relationships naturally also shapes his career as a renowned stage director in the Netherlands England throughout Europe and later around the world particularly in the U S As the heroine of Showboat opines Life upon the wicked stage ain t nothin what a girl or guy supposes and the bumps and grinds inherent in directing divas and divos on the opera stage provide many amusing tales and unexpected anecdotes In some cases he names names in others it s a rewarding guessing game
